Capper Sees Eisenhower Boom Going Places in '48

'Watch Him After He Leaves Army,' Senator Advises; Ball Boosts Stassen

Reece Challenges Truman

By William V. Nessly
Post Reporter

Another gun was fired on behalf of the Eisenhower-for-President move yesterday, as taxation and food costs were injected into the pre-1948 party skirmishing.

1. Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) said in a broadcast statement that, while "out of deference' to General Eisenhower's wishes he did not consider the Army Chief of Staff a candidate this year, "I do suggest that you watch him in 1948." Eisenhower then will have left the Army and taken over as president of Columbia University.

2. Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, charged in a statement that "the Truman administration" had collected a billion dollars more from income taxpayers than would have been the case if President Truman had not vetoed the first tax-cut bill passed by the Republican Congress. He challenged the President to campaign on the tax-cut issue next year.

Ball Sees Stassen Chance

3. Two senatorial backers of former Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, predicted that no one will be nominated for President on the first ballot at the Republican national convention next year and pictured an encouraging situation for their entry. Senators Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) and Joseph R. McCarthy (R. Wis.) pointed out to the Associated Press that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Senator Taft were in first and second places, respectively, on the first ballot at the 1940 convention but both were beaten by the late Wendell Willkie.

First Family Hears Sermon During Squall

By Frank L. Dennis
Post Reporter

Aboard USS Missouri, Sept 14.—Surrounded by grim evidences of man's reliance on armed might, President Truman today heard a sermon urging complete acceptance of the Providence of God.

Divine services were held on the fantail of the 55,000-ton battleship Missouri, one of the greatest fighting machines in the world, as she sped northward from Rio de Janeiro to Norfolk.

A few yards behind and above the speace where the presidential party was seated were the barrels of three 16-inch guns. Two warplanes, poised on catapults, framed the altar.

A light squall hit the ship as Comdr. L. J. Schmieder, a Catholic priest, who is the only chaplain aboard, began services designed for members of all denominations. The white-clad President, sitting in the front row, remained hatless despite the brief rain and wind-blown spray.

Mrs. Truman wore a two-piece yellow dress, and a green and yellow kerchief over her head. Their daughter, Margaret, wore a powder-blue dress and a yellow kerchief. The theme of the chaplain's discourse was taken from Romans 8:28, "To them that love God, all things work together unto good."

The chaplain admonished an assembly of about 15 civilians and

Prince Georges Set for Drive On Gambling

Police Head Promises To Hit Open Places Like 'Ton of Bricks'

Prince Georges County police were declared ready last night to strike down all gamblers who defy the county's new anti-gambling edict.

Chief of Police Ralph W. Brown asserted that violators were going to get "hit like a ton of bricks."

The chief reiterated his Saturday announcement that he would raid any gambling establishment found open beginning today.

Chief Brown said that too many District of Columbia gamblers who have been driven out of Washington in the current drive against gambling were attempting to settle in Prince Georges County.

"They seem to think they are running the county," Chief Brown declared. "The only thing to do is close all of them up."

Several "plushy" gambling parlors had been opened recently and a number of smaller places in the county apparently had been taken over by District gamblers who introduced such innovations as air conditioning and comfortable chairs.

Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. officials said they had not been contacted as yet by county police for cooperation in the drive against gambling but that the company "has cooperated in the past and will continue to cooperate."

The telephone company has no desire to provide service for illegal businesses and has removed these instruments whenever it has found that the phones are being used for illegal purposes, a local official said.

"The company is not a police department but we have a potent desire to cooperate," the official declared.

Meanwhile, Washington and Montgomery County police are preparing to resist invasion by gamblers run out of Prince Georges County.

World Expected To Produce More Grain This Year

The world will produce slightly more breadgrain in 1947 than last year in contrast to a below-average production in Europe and most other deficit areas, the Department of Agriculture reported yesterday.

The report said the situation points to substantially larger world import requirements than in 1946 and to another year of critically low bread rations for many areas.

The department's office of Foreign Agricultural Relations estimated the world wheat crop may approximate 5,975,000,000 bushels and the rye crop 1,450,000,000 bushels.

The wheat crop last year was 5,865,000,000 and rye 1,420,000,000 bushels.

Cleric Calls Long Skirts 'Immoral'

A Washington pastor yesterday declared that the new women's fashions are "immoral . . . moronic . . . and a crime against decency."

The Rev. A. Powell Davies, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., said that the new styles featuring longer skirts are immoral "because they waste material that is desperately needed, and . . . because they represent the foolish and grotesque in a world that is crying out for wisdom and sanity."

Dr. Davies last year branded as "utterly loathsome" a picture of Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy cutting a cake in the shape of an atomic bomb explosion at a party at the Army War College here.

Mr. Davies said the new styles "will deprive the shivering people of Europe of the wool they will need in a coal-less winter."

"Greedy commercial interests, knowing that women will resist buying new clothes at present inflated prices unless they can be tricked into doing so, propose to trick them by radically changing the fashions," Mr. Davies charged in his sermon.

Mr. Davies said American women "have humiliated themselves by following these imbecilic fashion changes like a herd of ludicrous cattle."

If American women follow the new fashions, warned Pastor Davies, "their Twentieth Century emancipation is just an empty boast and they may as well consider themselves as Victorian as their great-grandmothers but with less common-sense."

Women in Paris Wear Short Skirts

Paris, Sept. 14 (AP).—A knee-count on a busy corner in a good section of the city showed today that Parisians have not yet taken to the long skirts.

The standard adopted by the checker was:

Short skirts—Anything which showed the knee, fore or aft, while the wearer was walking.

Medium length—Anything reaching the upper part of the bulge of the calf.

Long—Anything reaching below a point midway down the bulge of the calf.

Score in a 10-minute count of passing women—50 short, 29 medium, 12 long.

Dulles Asks Power Solely From People

Tarrytown, Sept. 14 (INS).—John Foster Dulles, United States representative to the United Nations, called today for a "power which can be generated only by the people themselves."

He spoke at the opening ceremony at the United Nations Week "model community" of Tarrytown and North Tarrytown, N. Y.

Housewives Rebel as Food Prices Soar

Thousands Cross Canadian Line for Cheap Meat; Pleas Rise for Recontrol

Chicago, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—A consumer rebellion against soaring food costs spread today amid a flurry of charges and counter-charges placing the blame for the sharp upward spiral.

Butter and choice cuts of steak already had hit $1 or more per pound in some cities in the East. An area where the sharpest increases in food prices have been reported. Many Midwestern cities expected further price increases this week.

Although the consumer fight generally was not organized, a survey showed that resistance by individual housewives was strong in many cities.

Thousands of residents of Buffalo, N. Y., and Detroit poured across the border into Canada to buy steaks, eggs and butter at prices sharply below those in stores at home. At San Francisco, 60,000 persons jammed the Farmers Market to purchase fruits and vegetables directly from farmers. In other cities housewives were refusing to buy expensive foods and demands were heard for return of price control.

A report prepared for a joint congressional economic committee in its forthcoming investigation of prices blamed food costs on higher United States incomes rather than on food exports to hungry nations abroad. But business spokesmen disagreed.

The Illinois Manufacturers' Association charged that "indiscriminate transmission of large sums of money to Europe and elsewhere and the prolonged exportation of large quantities of raw materials and foodstuffs on a gift loan basis will continue to contribute to high prices in this country, will promote inflation in this country, and will ultmiately lead to domestic economic depression."

Eastern Cities Pinched Worst by Food Prices

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Hard-pressed consumers in Dallas, San Francisco, Denver and Kansas City fared better than those in Eastern cities as they watched their food bills take off for the stratosphere between mid-August and mid-September.

An Associated Press survey of the retail price of eight foods in ordinary use in 13 key cities in all sections of the Nation reveals that while the rising cost of food pinched everywhere during the month, New York, Philadelphia and Boston felt it more than the cities to the West.

The same cities were surveyed on the same commodities in mid-August and a month later, using the same sources in both surveys.

Eggs and butter were the chief offenders during the month, advancing everywhere, partly for seasonal production reasons.

Meat prices continued the rise noted a month earlier, but their heaviest gains were made before mid-August.

Minneapolis Suffers Most

Minneapolis suffered most from meat price hikes during the month, but New York, Boston and St. Louis also reported their meat bills painfully higher. However, Denver, Dallas and San Francisco said some meat quotations dropped during the month.

Bread and milk bills were changed only slightly, but in several cities consumers were on notice of price increases to come.

Canned tomatoes declined most places as the new pack poured into the market.

Red Leader Denounces U. S. in Italy

Communists Shout 'Death to Truman' During Speeches At Monza, Florence

Rome, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Before 100,000 Communists who shouted "Death to Truman," Italy's Russian-trained Communist Boss Palmiro Togliatti today denounced the United States as a "world dictatorship' trying to "spread another war."

Togliatti spoke twice, at Monza and Florence. In both impassioned speeches he declared Russia offered more to Italy than America, called for a strict press censorship to prevent "the deception of the people," and denied that Italy's Communists had secret stores of arms ready for an uprising.

Togliatti's attack on the United States was another blow in his relentless campaign to install a leftist government in Italy. The campaign began last Sunday with the threat to use "30,000 well-trained partisans" to overthrow Premier Alcide de Gasperi's rightist cabinet and has mounted in intensity throughout the week.

The leftist assault has included a strike of one million agricultural workers, a general strike due in Veneto Province tomorrow and a scheduled strike Tuesday of 850,000 metal workers—all designed to create chaos and force De Gasperi to resign.

A huge Communist crowd in Monza public park cried, "Death to Truman," as Togaliatti declared, "the Soviet Union, a peaceful, work-loving country, has been slandered by the Italian and foreign press."

Togliatti, who lived for 15 years in Russia, flayed United States press reports that his Communists were making ready to seize the government by force.

"I have to emphasize that we do not have arms and should those weapons exist really it may be the United States had distributed them, not to the workers, but to the Fascists, "the Communist chief asserted.

Needs Foreign Aid

Togliatti recalled that De Gasperi had sought American dollars to "sustain his anti-democratic government." He conceded Italy still needs help from abroad, but said "this should not come only from one side, but from everywhere."

Togliatti did not repeat last Sunday's boast that 30,000 partisans were "ready to fight" for liberty.

At Florence Togliatti told a Communist conference they must work "for unity to save the people from the danger of being involved in another war which groups of men at the heads of great countries are preparing."

He said he recognized what the United States had done for Italy, but said, "we do not recognize their right to conduct an imperialist policy to impose world domination on other countries."

In Rome, government ministers conferred in emergency meetings with both labor and management representatives in a last minute attempt to stall the scheduled strike of metal workers and the six-day-old strike of agricultural workers in north Italy.

Socialist Leader Pietro Nenni joined with Togliatti in the planned program of strikes designed to bring about the downfall of De Gasperi's government and replace it wit ha purely leftist regime. Added ammunition were their threats to call out state clerical employes and tobacco workers in Venezia.

The leftist-controlled labor federation declared that if the government does not surrender to the metal workers' demands by tomorrow the Tuesday walkout will go forward as planned, paralyzing heavy industry in Milan, Turin and Terni.

41% in D. C. Area Expect Housing Prices to Drop

What will happen to the price of houses in the next twelve months is a question on which Washingtonians are divided, according to a recent Post Poll.

Forty-one per cent think prices of houses will come down, while nearly as many, 37 per cent, believe they will remain the same.

Only 12 per cent think prices of houses will reach new heights in the coming year. The remainder have no opinion on this question.

Among residents who plan to remain in Greater Washington 22 per cent have some plans to buy or build a home, but only 3 per cent expect to take action in the next 12 months. Including these, seven per cent may be expected to enter the house market before the end of two years. The other 15 per cent have more remote plans.

These findings of The Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of adults living in Greater Washington.

Local residents were asked:

"In the next 12 months, do you think prices of houses will go up, come down, or stay about the same?"

Replies were as follows:

Expect prices will come down	41%
Expect prices will stay the same	37
Expect prices will go up	12
Undecided	10

Relatively more of the college-educated were optimistic about a drop in the price of houses within the next 12 months. Forty-seven per cent of the college-educated expect a decline in prices, as compared with 40 per cent of the high-school educated, and 32 per cent of those with grade-school education.

Those who do not plan to move out of the Washington area within the next 12 months were asked:

"Do you have any definite plans to buy or build a house in the future?" (If "Yes") "When do you plan to buy or build?"

They replied:

No plans to buy or build	75%
Plans to buy or build	22

1-1.9 years	4
2-4.9 years	7
5 years or more	6

World Leaders Gather in N. Y. For Crucial Assembly Session

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—An important array of world leaders, including at least 20 foreign ministers, today converged on New York City for one of the most crucial meetings of the postwar period—the 1947 session of the United Nations General Assembly.

A good portion of the 275 delegates from 55 nations, including Secretary of State Marshall, already were on hand and engaged in a series of hotel conferences aimed at coordinating policies for the meetings opening Tuesday morning.

Only Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov and British Foreign Secretary Bevin were missing from the list and the possibility still was held open that one or both might join the conclave later.

Andrei V. Vishinsky, Molotov's top deputy; Hector McNeil, the No. 2 man in British foreign affairs, and French Foreign Minister Bidault will arrive Tuesday. Other delegates such as Australia's Herbert V. Evatt and Brazil's Oswaldo Aranha, rated the leading candidates for the assembly presidency; China's Foreign Minister Wang and Foreign Minister Manuilsky of the Soviet Ukraine already were in pre-assembly conferences here.

The Arab bloc, topped by Prince Faisal of Saudi Arabia, was engaged in a series of secret sessions mapping strategy for its battle against the Palestine report calling for partition of the Holy Land.

Public interest, rocketed by such explosive issues as Palestine and Greece, kept U. N. offices busy with ticket rejections. More than 10,000 requests for seats at the opening were turned down and applications continued to pile up for later sessions.

A nationwide observance of United Nations Week, sponsored by the American Association for the United Nations, got under way in several sections of the country today.

Tickets for the public are limited to a token representation of 30 for the first day but from then on 600 per meeting become available. The sprawling assembly hall seats nearly 2400 persons but the bulk of the space goes to delegations, the U. N. staff and the press.

The U. N. plans to introduce simultaneous translation at sessions this year with interpreters seated in glass-enclosed booths near the speakers platform "broad-

Higher Taxes In Prospect For Britons

Emergency Budget Believed Necessary To Combat Inflation

London, Sept. 14 (AP).—An emergency national budget with higher taxes to combat inflation was forecast today.

An authoritative government source said Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton probably would present the budget to Parliament soon after it reconvenes October 20. Increased taxes would have two purposes:

1. To take money away from the people so they could not bid up the prices of scarce commodities.

2. To release labor for export industries by "freezing" nonessential manufacturers and small-time blackmarket operators out of business. Presumably with extra money taken away from the people, neither would have a market for their wares.

Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the government's board of trade, said Friday that commodity shortages, already serious, will increase sharply because of his plan to sell more industrial products aboard and fewer on the home market.

London newspapers speculated today that the government also would fight inflation by curtailing food subsidies and allowing food costs to rise, and possibly by limiting dividens.

The Sunday newspaper, Reynolds News, attacked "'rumor-mongers" who it said "panicked" people into raiding shops yesterday for goods they feared would soon become scarce.

The paper said some tobacconists were holding back supplies on the strength of reports that a new cigarette tax next month would raise the price from 68 cents to $1.40 a pack.

"The facts are," the paper said, "that Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton is still considering whether to increase taxation or to reduce the quantity of tobacco leaf imported for home consumption."

Military Planes Being Flown Out Of Storm Area

Miami, Fla., Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Mass evacuation of military aircraft began in this area today against the chance that a king-size hurricane rumbling omniously through the Atlantic might hit the Florida coastline.

Both Army and Navy air bases started flying their planes to safer ground despite Weather Bureau reports that the violent tropical storm probably would by-pass south Florida in a northward shift, spending its fury at sea.

Lie Deplores Discord of Great Powers

Continuation Will Result in Betrayal Of U. N., He Asserts

Baltimore, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Secretary General Trygve Lie told the great world powers today that they will betray the United Nations principles if they accept a chronic state of disagreement among themselves.

Lie told the United Nations Association of Maryland that the world poltical situation is unpleasant and shows no sign of improvement. Political rivalries, he said, are hampering economic reconstruction and signing of peace treaties with the major enemy powers.

"It is not for me to quarrel with the position of any power or any group of powers," the U. N. administrator said, "I can only point out that these treaties remain to be signed, that it is the duty of the powers to conclude them and that the consequences are what they are."

Show of Impatience

"It would be treacherous to the whole idea of the United Nations—a union brought about by war and dedicated to perpetual peace—to condone or be satisfied with a chronic state of disagreement between the powers."

Lie's strong statement, coming two days before the United Nations General Assembly meets, was his strongest public show of impatience at the prolonged, often fruitless debating between Russia and the western power. Many U. N. discussions, he said, "have often been carried on in what has seemed to be on unfriendly and uncompromising spirit."

"Any so-called success, or any so-called failure, of the United Nations boils right down to the success or failure of the nations to work together and settle their differences."

Warlike Issues Few

He said liberation movement among colonial peoples since the war provides possibilities of conflict, as do "widespread social adjustments" elsewhere. Nevertheless, he added, "purely warlike complications have been few and of minor dimensions."

"If the situation today is better than it was after the First World War, I feel that we can attribute the fact principally to the unquestionable progress which we have made in international cooperation."

Old Tag Recalls 15-Cent Steak

Mount Vernon, Wash., Sept. 14 (AP).—Workmen tearing down the old Olympic Hotel building yesterday found a reminder of the dim past. Among old papers was a price tag on which was scribbled "T-bone steak, 15 cents a pound."

U. N. Action On Greece Demanded By Marshall

State Secretary Challenges Body To Protect Nation From Aggressors

(Text of Marshall Address, Page 8)

By R. H. Shackford

New York, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall today challenged the United Nations to protect Greek independence and sovereignty and disclosed that this country will have several concrete proposals for using "more fully" existing U. N. machinery durinng the General Assembly session which opens Tuesday.

Marshall interrupted a busy, last-minute round of conferences with United States and U. N. officials to tell some 900 guests at a luncheon of the American Association for the United Nations that Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania are threatening Greece.

Marshall made it plain that he plans to throw the full weight of this nation—and his personal prestige—into the struggle to give more power to the General Assembly and by inference, less to the U. N. Security Council.

Supported by Mexico

Marshall's position was supported by Mexico's foreign minister Jaime Torresbodet, who told reporters on his arrival at Laguardia field today that "the Assembly may still become the best means of reconciling the differences in points of view" in the U. N.

Marshall implied that failure to meet the critical issue of Greece would endanger U. N.'s future.

Ignoring the Security Council where the Soviet Union has blocked action with its veto, Marshall said the General Assembly is "the forum in which our disagreement must be resolved."

Without mentioning the Soviet Union or its obstructionist use of the veto, he warned that fears about the "aims and intentions" of U. N. members themselves were the greatest cause of anxiety over the organization's future.

"We find it difficult to believe that members of the organization would deliberately seek to destroy its structure by persistence in acts of aggression or by obstruction of a nature to paralyze the principal organs of the organization," he said.

Marshall also:

Other Points Stressed

1.—Opened the door to possible amendment of the U. N. Charter but said the United States still was opposed to "major revisions."

2.—Disclosed that this country will make several proposals for using "more fully" existing U. N. machinery.

3.—Appealed to the Assembly to make every effort to get "maximum agreement" at this session on a solution of the complex Palestine question.

4.—Reaffirmed the United States'

N. J. Boy Feared Kidnaped as Note Demands $1000

Kearny, N. J., Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Jackie Preston, a sickly 11-year-old son of a truck driver, has been missing from his home since Friday and his parents, frightened by a crude ransom note demanding $1000, were convinced today he had been kidnaped.

Police did not list the case formally as a kidnaping.

The note said Jackie had been injured after he was abducted and threatened to kill him if his parents failed to follow instructions for paying the money.

The ransom note, full of boyish misspellings, demanded that Jackie's $100-a-week truck driver father, John P. Preston, deliver $1000 in cash to a street corner at "four bells p. m. Monday afternoon."

Preston and the boy's distraught mother, Mrs. Genevieve Preston, said Jackie had written the note. They were sure kidnapers had forced him to do so.

Preston said he would get the money from a friend and try to keep the appointment.

The note demanded that the parents turn over the $1000 to a boy—"he'll know nothing, he's just a hired boy"—at the corner of First and Sussex sts. There is no such intersection in Kearny but there is in nearby Newark.

Social Center for Teenagers Is Planned at Falls Church

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Several weeks ago teen-ager Frances Fought gave a party at her parents' Falls Church home, inviting 36 friends.

When party time rolled around, 70 Falls Church teen-agers turned up—they overflowed from living room to porch to lawn.

To Frances' stepmother, Mrs. Dorice Fought, the invasion emphasized the No. 1 problem of town high-schoolers: The need for a teen social center.

Young people of Falls Church today are meeting that need themselves.

On Saturday they looked over architect's plans of a modern one-story recreation center they'll help build themselves with their own money.

The L-shaped building, flanked by an outdoor fireplace, terrace, and pool, will have a 20-by-60 foot hall with a stage at one end, and will also offer heating and washroom facilities.

The cost will approximate $7000—if the young people pitch in on much of the building, and provided materials can be obtained from adult backers at cost. Otherwise, says architect William Byrd, construction costs would nearly double.

Teen agers are going after the money on a multiple front. With two plays given in the Madison School in Falls Church, they raised $700. Their performance of the melodrama, "Dirty Work at

U. S. Surpluses Armed Sikhs, Pakistan Envoy Here Charges

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

American surplus war material figured in the bloody, post-independence religious rioting in India, Hassan Ispahani, Ambassador-designate of the new nation of Pakistan, charged yesterday.

Armed with United States-made "automatic weapons, jeeps and weapon carriers," he declared, warlike Sikhs of northern India touched off the fierce warfare and rioting that took a toll of 200,000 lives in the past three weeks.

Sikhs, bearded warrior race of the split Punjab province, were "entirely and solely" responsible for the savage fighting and slaughtering, Ispahani said at his first Washington press conference, at the Shoreham Hotel. He contended weapons used by the Sikhs were obtained from independent Sikh princes in North India, who had purchased them at American surplus property sales.

Ispahani, simultaneously lashed at the British arbiter who drew the boundary line between Parkistan and India, Cir Cyril Radcliffe. If his decision had not been "absolutely unjust and unfair," Ispahani declared, Radcliffe would have placed the boundary farther east to include all the Sikhs in Pakistan "where they could have lived as a united and peaceful minority."

The Sikhs, he claimed, were incensed over the partitioning that divided them almost exactly in half. Consequently, Ispahani contended, they attacked Moslems on the Parkistan side of the border

Taft's Closed Shop Talk Draws Protest

Eastern Republicans Urge Ohioan To Hold Line as He Goes South

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

En Route with Taft Party, Sept. 14.—Senator Robert A. Taft headed southward tonight to Los Angeles amid a flurry of Eastern GOP protests against more talk of liberalizing the Taft-Hartley Act's ban on the closed shop.

A Taft spokesman said a number of Eastern Republicans had put through phone calls and wires urging the Ohioan to "hold the line" against changes in the labor-management law.

The protests followed reliable indications that Taft is amenable to permitting a closed shop in cases where a nemployer and a majority of his plant workers agree. The law now flatly bans a closed shop.

Voiced Sympathy

Taft voiced sympathy with such a change in a Santa Cruz conference Saturday with Harry Lundeberg, head of the AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific. Lundeberg is primarily interested in retaining the sailors' "hiring hall" sytem in a new contract with the ship owners.

Taft's position is reliably understood to be this: He has always regarded the closed shop ban as the most radical provision of the Taft-Hartley Act. He personally would have no objection to an amendment legalizing the closed shop where employers and a majority of the workers want it. He may be willing to sponsor a more limited amendment dealing with the shipping industry as a special case.

But whatever his own views, Taft feels it may be difficult to make any changes in the Taft-Hartley Act during an election year session loaded to the limit with other national and international measures.

Speaks Here Twice

The Taft party will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow morning. The Senator will make two speeches next day in support of the record of the Eightieth Congress. Originally he had planned to discuss 1948 campaign issues there as well, but it was learned he now regards it as "too early" to appraise these.

His first speech in Los Angeles will be at a Tuesday luncheon, under the nonpartisan auspices of Town Hall. This marked another change from the original plan for a GOP-sponsored luncheon. Both Gov. Earl Warren and spokesmen for Taft have denied Warren strategists engineered the change.

Taft's relations with Warren on this trip makes 1948 strategy of California's GOP Governor increasingly clear. He has been cordial with Taft—in fact, he told Taft to come to California and make as many speeches as he liked. But his courtesies haven't differed one whit from those extended other visiting GOP possibilities.

Warren Is for Warren

When Warren goes to Philadelphia next June for the Republican convention, none doubt that all of California's 53 convention votes will be in his pocket. Where will they go? The saying here is, "Warren is for Warren."

From Taft's three-day stay in Santa Cruz, where he defended the Taft-Hartley Act and States rights before a State Bar Association panel, these other conclusions may be drawn:

1. The AFL-CIO picketing demonstrations, expected to recur at other points on this West Coast tour, disturb Taft strategists not at all. In fact, they insist it may serve to consolidate Taft's non-union support. Senator James Murray (D., Mont.), Taft's opposite on the Senate Labor Committee, said he agreed such demonstrations "may help Taft."

2. A note of caution has entered his press conference ever since his ad libbed "eat-less-meat" advice to the American people, but those who know Taft say he can't step out of character. He will make his major price speech in San Francisco Friday. Spokesmen said he will pull no punches.

Before boarding the train for Los Angeles at San Jose tonight, Taft spent the day at the beach home of Arthur Dunne, San Francisco attorney, polishing rough drafts of forthcoming speeches.

Tomorrow night he will be the dinner guest of Louis B. Mayer, Hollywood movie agent, at his Beverly Hills home. He will leave Los Angeles Wednesday for a two-day air inspection trip of the lower colorado River area, viewing Boulder Dam, Parker Dam, Imperial Dam and other river works.

10,000 Jap Pows Rebuilding Lenningrad

Tokyo, Sept. 14 (AP).—The newspaper Mainichi quoted a returned prisoner of war today as declaring there were "more than 10,000 Japanese prisoners living and working with Soviet troops" in the reconstruction of Leningrad. The prisoner was identified as Tsuyoshi Sato, former flight sergeant and first Japanese repatriated from Leningrad.

He said he was sent to the Russian metropolis in November, 1945, because he was an expert on internal combustion engines. He said he was amazed to find many Japanese technicians already there, and the number increased constantly.

GW University Purchases Apartment for Nurses Home

The Everglades Apartment, 2223 H st. nw., has been purchased by George Washington University for use as a nurses home. The eight-storp brick structure, containing 80 apartments, was purchased from Bernard Bralove, trustee, at a cost of $400,000.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, said that the university planned to begin housing nurses in the apartment shortly after the first of the year. Present tenants will not be disturbed until then, and will be given ample notices.

The building is located on 7625 square feet of ground one block south of the new 408-bed University Hospital, now neaing completion at Washington Cicle. Dr. Marvin said he hoped that the operation of a nurses home near the hospital will stimulate the procurement of nurses for the new medical center.

ilies in the Washington area, or an estimated 9000 families, consider themselves prospects in this year's house market.

Forty-nine per cent of the prospects think prices will come down in the next 12 months. This fact should be taken into consideration in estimating the house market in Washington.

People planning to buy or build were asked:

"In what section do you plan to buy or build?"

Answers were as follows:

Section in which prospects plan to buy or build a house	Pct. of all prospects
Northwest	17%
Prince Georges Co., Md.	17
Montgomery Co., Md.	14
Northeast	13
Arlington Co., Va.	6
Fairfax Co., Va.	4
Alexandria, Va.	3
Undecided	26

They were also asked:

"About how much can you afford to spend altogether on a house (and lot)?"

Prospects replied:

Under $5000	2%
$5000-$9999	25
$10,000-$14,999	42
$15,000-$19,999	15
$20,000 and over	5
Don't know	11
Median estimate	$13,000

The average house prospect states that he can afford to spend about $13,000 altogether on a house, an estimate that is much higher than that shown by earlier studies. In 1944, the Washington Board of Trade made a survey of the Washington area in which it was found that median price expectations were about $7600.

Family incomes of the house prospects are somewhat lower than would be expected in view of what they say they can afford to spend. Thirty-two per cent of this group say their incomes are under $3000 a year; 35 per cent say their incomes are $3000 to $4999 a year, and 30 per cent say their incomes are $5000 a year or over.

Homebuilding Hits New High In August

By The Associated Press

Homebuilding activity reached a new high level for 1947 in August, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

The bureau said 524,100 homes were put under construction during the first eight months of 1947, or 56,000 more than during the same 1946 period.

In August private builders started 83,000 homes in urban areas, 3000 more than the July total and 17,600 over the number started in August, 1946.

Elaborating on its August homebuilding figures, based on preliminary estimates, the bureau said:

"Early indications from local building permit reports are that home building increased in nearly all parts of the country, only the east north central and the mountain regions showing slight declines."

The bureau estimated that 70,300 permanent homes were completed in August, making a total of about 500,000 nonfarm dwellings made ready for occupancy during the first eight months of the year.

AVC to Back Passage Of T-E-W Housing Bill

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., national housing chairman of the American Veterans Committee, said yesterday that local AVC units were preparing to present complete details on the housing crisis when congressional hearings open in October.

He said that each unit would give an up-to-the minute picture of the situation in its area.

"AVC believes that the only long-range solution is he Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill," he added. "We will press vigorously for its enactment in the next session of Congress."

Eisenhower Boom to Pick Up Steam by '48, Capper Says

race," Ball said, "and Harold Stassen will be up in there."

4. Representative Sabath (D., Ill.) leaped upon the assertion by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) that Americans should eat less and eat less extravagantly in order to combat high food prices, advice that Taft says was first uttered by President Truman. Sabath, in a broadcast, declared that Taft had the poor people of the country in mind when he made his statement, adding that the Senator "and his wealthy friends do not have to restrict themselves."

Plugging for General Eisenhower's choice as the GOP nominee despite the latter's statement that he deplored the formation of Eisenhower-for-President organizations, Senator Capper said that "all over the United States there are good Americans who look forward to the possibility of helping elect General Eisenhower."

He said he shares the expressed view of former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Eisenhower's home State, that unless the general "takes himself out of the picture by some unequivocal statement, he will be a factor" in the Republican convention "whether or not he is an announced candidate."

The Senator said he appreciated Eisenhower's scruples against being placed in the position as Chief of Staff, of being considered a candidate for the Presidency," but pointed out that shortly after the beginning of the election year the general would be a private citizen.

GOP Chairman Reece's needling statement took advantage of today's third-quarter income tax deadline.

"If Mr. Truman," he said, "had not vetoed the first tax bill, millions of taxpayers would be enjoying the fruits on Republican tax cuts on September 15. They would be receiving the benefits of 3 months of cuts—July, August, September—or one-fourth of the 30 or 20 per cent cuts. Since the total cut for six months of 1947 was estimated at 2.145 billion dollars the cut for July, August and September would be approximately one-half or just over one billion dollars."

He said "it is an outrageous imposition upon the American people that because of the abuse of the presidential veto power relief from war-time tax rates has been delayed for at least six months."

Senator McCarthy revealed that Stassen backers set much store in the Wisconsin presidential primaries next April.

"If Stassen can knock off Dewey in Wisconsin he will be well on his way," he said, while conceding that a Dewey victory in that State would be a "setback" for the Stassen camp.

He pictured the Wisconsin vote as "the first real test for the Republican candidate, recalling that Willkie withdrew in 1944 after failing to win a single delegate from Wisconsin.

Dewey in Massachusetts For First Visit Since '44

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 14 (INS).—Governor Dewey arrived in Springfield this afternoon for his first extended visit to New England since his campaign for the Presidency in 1944.

The New York Governor, here to attend the Eastern States Exposition, will have the opportunity during the next two days to talk with executives from nine other Eastern States, which, among them, will send more than 200 delegates to the 1948 Republican National Convention.

Attending the exposition are the Governors of New York, Pennsylvania, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Delaware and Connecticut, the lieutenant-governor of Rhode Island and the secretary of state of New Jersey.

The State representatives were to attend a supper in their honor tonight and then proceed to the coliseum at the exposition grounds, where they were to be introduced and speak briefly. They will speak again tomorrow at a luncheon in the Massachusetts building at the exposition grounds.

U.S. Backing Asked For Steel Program

End of Shortage Nowhere in Sight, Henry Kaiser Says

By the United Press

Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser, asserting that the end of the steel shortage is nowhere in sight, yesterday called on the Federal Government to underwrite a national steel expansion program as "a guarantee against depression."

He emphasized that he did not want the Government to get into the steel business, but said that "industry cannot be expected to assume all the risk of expansion—if the risk is to be assumed at all, the Federal Government must assume it."

He proposed that the Government reinstitute its wartime policy of protecting steel plant expansion by granting tax concessions. This provided for a 20 to 25 per cent exemption for plant depreciation, instead of the peacetime rate of 4 per cent. It also called for bigger tax concessions if the war ended earlier than expected.

Notes His Request

Kaiser noted in a statement that he had asked the Reconstruction Finance Corp., for a financial adjustment" under which he said his Fontana, Calif., steel plant could give the western states a larger steel supply.

Kaiser now owes the RFC 105 million dollars on the plant. Last May he sought an $85,329,999 reduction on grounds that wartime construction costs were excessive and that he entered the contract at the Government's request. The RFC rejected the proposal and Kaiser now has asked for a reduction of $34,510,000, with the remainder of the loan to be refinanced.

Kaiser differed sharply with top steel executives who told the Senate small business committee Friday that the industry can whip the steel shortage within two years.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corp., and Eugene G. Grace, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corp., agreed that the shortage would be over by then if the steel scrap situation eases, coal coke and sufficient ore are available, and there are no strikes in steel and allied industries.

5 Year Shortage Seen

But Kaiser said that "some" steel men expect the shortage to last four or five years at present plant capacity.

By leaving steel-making capacity where it now stands, he said, "we would underwrite the economy of scarcity" and "write the prescription for a depression."

"I do not believe that we will have a depression unless our own timidity invites one," he added.

He recalled that after V-J Day steel management promised "sufficient" steel very soon, but "that 'very soon' has been stretched over two years and nowhere is there any sign that basic steel-making capacity has come abreast of even domestic demand."

He said production mounted steadily from 1900 to 1946 and then fell off harply until now it has been cutback by four million to five million tons.

"This cutback has been by decision of long established steel management, who argue that this country has sufficient steel capacity or that if it hasn't it will very soon have," he said.

"Let us be patient, let us be humble, let us be resigned; when the dark night of sorrow falls on our souls, let us still adore that divine Providence which disposes of all things mightily and sweetly according to the impenetrable designs of infinite wisdom."

He also said: "How wonderful and consoling are God's merciful dealings with men, when we compare them with the harshness with which men often treat one another."

The chaplain made no special reference to the President's presence, other than to welcome the guests to the services. Several of the presidential party besides the Trumans attended.

A feature of services unusual to civilians was that no collection was taken.

Musicians, for services were William H. Sorrell, Birmingham, Ala., ships' bandmaster, who played the piano; Calvin Hauffe, Pensacola, Fla., who played a violin solo, accompanied by Pianist John Wigent of the Navy Band in Washington D. C., and Fred Russell, Corpus Christi, Tex., second violinist.

5000 on West Coast Reported Taking Long-Life Serum Shots

By the United Press

Some 5000 elderly Californians are going regularly to a Los Angeles clinic for a treatment they hope will give them a life span of 100 years or more, the Pathfinder magazine reported yesterday.

They are taking injjections of a possible life-prolonging serum discovered by the late Dr. Alexander Bogomoletz, Russian scientist: It is beng administered by Dr. Harry Goldblatt, former Wetern Reserve Unversity scientist, wo is to head the new Medical Research Institute at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles.

The magazine said Goldblatt "sees small likelihood that he has launched any centenarians, but he thinks the serum has had at least a mild tonic effect on some of them."

Nearly 50 years ago Bogomoletz was troubled by a problem that he saw daily. Why do human beings die so much earlier than other animals—measured in terms of the time it takes them to reach full maturity?

Pathfinder said other scientists concerned with the same question had concentrated on the vital organs of the body.

"But there remained the general deterioration, not caused by gross organ-failure or predatory microbes, which still filled people over 70," the magazine said. "Bogomoletz tracked down people it hadn't felled, according to Pathfinder, and found the answer in their connective tissue—the reticulo-endothelial cells.

The function of these cells—apart from holding the body in shape—is simply to pass nutriment to hungry working cells and pass their excretions back the other way.

When these tissues begin to fail, the working capacity of the body does, too—and old age results.

So Bolomoletz injected choked, non-working cells into animals, drawing off the serum they developed in self-protection. He tried it out on human beings, but the experiment was interrupted by the war.

After the Axis nations collapsed, Goldblatt took up where the Russian had left off, Pathfinder said, and produced a serum, which he had Russian scientific check.

Navy Fliers Find Hurricane Contains Core Within Core

(Editor's Note—Lieut. Comdr. A. R. Fields, aerological officer of Meterological Squadron 3, based at the Naval Air Station, Miami, Fla., twice flew into the heart of a raging tropical hurricane in the South Atlantic aboard a Navy hurricane-hunter privateer. On the second trip, flown yesterday, the radar operator found that the storm had developed another "eye," a condition never before observed. He describes below in graphic detail the two trips aboard the four-motored aircraft and the discovery of the "double eye."

By Lieut. Comdr. A. R. Fields, USN

As Told to the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Sept. 15 (AP).—We were about 10 miles from the core of the hurricane when our radar operator reported on the intercom system that he had picked up "something screwy" on the radar's scope.

"It looks like the storm had a double eye," he reported.

I studied the scope and it very definitely showed the two distinct concentric cores in the storm. I believe that this is the first time such a condition has been found in such a perfectly developed state in any tropical hurricane.

It appeared as though one eye was forming around the other.

The best way to describe it would be a spool sitting inside a bowl. The outer rim of the bowl would represent the outer fringe of the storm—or the terrifically turbulent air with winds above 100 miles an hour. The space between the spool and the rim of the bowl would represent the new developing eye, where there is calm air and only a few scattered low clouds. The spool would represent the core of the storm where the winds are the stronges tand the hollow center of the spool would represent the old eye.

The center of the storm—the space between the bowl and the spool—is perfectly calm. It was like a pleasure cruise flying inside. The fishbowl of calm air was a 30-mile doughnut surrounding the core. The core of the storm, which I estimated to be about seven miles in diameter, resembles the pictures of the atomic bomb explosion at Bikini. It is a fringed column of gray clouds that extend from the ocean's surface up to 15,000 or 20,000 feet. Inside that column is a core of hazy, calm air, the true "eye" of the storm.

On the first day we penetrated only a mile or so into the "eye." After flying on instruments in extremely rough weather, we came out into this bowl of peaceful air. The sun was shining and we could see the sea below.

On the second day, when we found the double-eye, we entered from the south flying with the wind on the port beam. We tried to circle inside the calm area but the turn was not tight enough and we got caught in the gray wall of violent air surrounding the "eye." We weer about 1200 feet altitude and we plunged down to about 400 or 500 feet almost before we knew what happened.

When the radar altimeter indicated 800 feet altitude, an observer in the after station reported getting salt spray in his face. This was confirmed by the co-pilot who was sitting on the same side.

The pilots tried for over a minute to raise the right wing. They put all their weight on the controls but the plane failed to respond. We were being kicked around badly and the pilots reported their instruments useless.

We all felt as though we'd received an eleventh hour reprieve from execution when the plane staggered back into the calm outer eye.

It's difficult to explain the double-eye formation. It may be that as the storm grows in size and intensity, it can't accommodate the great volume of subsiding air and simply creates a new core around the original core.

Every storm in its development may go through such a change and we may have come across it just at the intermediate stage of development which nobody has happened to stumble on.

Miss Truman Finds Missouri Deck Hard

Aboard USS Missouri, Sept. 14. — Margaret Truman and Stanley Woodward learned how hard a battleship deck is today.

The President's daughter and the chief of protocol of the State Department each landed in sitting position with a thud, after slipping during a game of deck tennis.

Spray whipped across the main deck and drenched the court during a game between Miss Truman and Woodward on one side, and Rear Admiral Foskett and Major General Graham, the President's physician, on the other.

First Miss Truman, running to catch flying quoit, skidded and plopped on the teakwood deck. A little later Woodward, already somewhat sore from the Equator - crossing ceremony, landed squarely on his haunches.

1 Killed, 14 Hurt In Boat Explosion

Brielle, N. J., Sept. 14 (U.P.).—An explosion and fire aboard an excursion boat on which 35 to 40 passengers were waiting to leave on a Sunday ocean-fishing cruise killed one man and injured 14 others here today.

The blast shook the 50-foot Paramount III as the crew was warming up its engines. Jacob Sieber, 48, Dunellen, N. J., died of head injuries and shock at Fitkin Hospital.

CIO Puts N. Y. Unemployed At 450,000; Sees Depression

New York, Sept. 14 (NYHT).—The current number of jobless persons in New York City was placed today at 450,000 by the Greater New York Congress of Industrial Organizations Council, which warned that "all signs point clearly to a serious economic crack-up."

The estimate of jobless and the warnings were included in a report released today at the council headquarters based on a check of CIO union affiliates here, unemployment insurance figures and other data. On March 31, the council estimated the city's jobless at 300,000.

Pointing to the estimated 150,000 increase since then, the council report asserted that: "The danger signal sounded then was justified unemployment continues to rise, all signs point clearly to a serious economic crack-up, but no spokesmen for either management or government has offered any plan to prevent the oncoming depression."

The report claimed that its survey showed that "many small consumer goods manufacturers have closed down without any hopes of reopening. Material shortages and season factors were "minor exceptions" in the reasons "offered for the increasing number of lay-offs and halted production of consumer goods."

According to the report, "the universal reason" given for layoffs in consumer goods manufacture "is the ridiculously and highly inflated level of prices being asked for such goods."

A month ago the average for the 13 cities was 77 cents, today it is 80 cents, and in 1939 it was 31 cents.

Round Steak—Philadelphia pays the most for round steak, 99 cents a pound, closely followed by St. Louis, where prices range from 89 to 98 cents. The jump in the Quaker City was 6 cents in the month. The Missouri city reported steak at 89 cents in mid-August. Denver, in the cattle country, reported round steak at 87 cents a month ago and only 79 today. Atlanta and Dallas prices were unchanged. The average for the 13 cities in August was 83 cents and today 86 cents. In 1939 it was 36 cents a pound.

Bread—Prices were unchanged for the 13 cities as a whole, averaging 14 cents both today and a month ago, for a pound loaf that brought around 8 cents in 1939. Prices ranged from 11 cents in Philadelphia to 15 in New York. Small price advances were reported in Denver, Minneapolis, Columbus and Boston during the month, and declines in Philadelphia, St. Louis and Dallas.

Butter—Sharp advances were reported in most of the cities in the month, the steepest at Minneapolis, which paid 95 cents for a pound that brought 72 a month ago. St. Louis, however, paid the highest price $1 a pound, a gain of 20 cents. Smallest increases were reported in Dallas and Philadelphia, 4 cents each; the Texas city now paying 83 cents and the Quaker City 90. The increase for the 13 cities as a whole was 12 cents. A month ago the average price was 78, today 90, and in 1939 a pound brought 31 cents.

Eggs—Prices rose everywhere in the month but today range from 69 cents a dozen in Kansas City and Dallas to 95 cents in New York and Philadelphia. These two eastern cities had the most startling increases in the month, 34 cents in New York and 30 in Philadelphia. Smallest gain was the 2-cent rise in Columbus from 72 last month to 74 today. Bostonians pay only 3 cents a dozen more than in mid-August and the Texans 4 cents more. A month ago the average price in the 13 cities was 66 cents, today it is 80 cents and in 1939 it was 32.

Milk—Prices advanced 2 cents a quart in Philadelphia, and 1 cent in New York, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, Kansas City and Seattle. Prices were unchanged in Minneapolis, St. Louis, Atlanta, Dallas, San Francisco and Denver. Today's price range is from 17 cents in Denver, Minneapolis and Columbus to 22 cents in Atlanta. The average for the 13 cities: 20 today, 19 a month ago, 11 prewar.

Tomatoes, No. 2 can—The only commodity in the survey to show any average decline in price in the 13 cities in the month, canned tomatoes dropped from an average of 18 cents a month ago to 16 cents today. In 1939 the average was about 8½ cents. The only city to report an increase in the month was Denver, which now pays 18, 1 cent more. Prices were unchanged in Seattle and Chicago, and down as much as 4 cents a can in Boston, Columbus and Kansas City. Lowest price reported was Philadelphia's 12 cents, and the highest was 19 cents in San Francisco, Seattle, and Boston. Market analysts pointed out that at this season consumers had the benefit of the new pack, with large volume moving into distribution channels.

Factory Worker Penny Worse Off Than in '41

By the United Press

Labor Department statisticians said yesterday that the average 1947 factory worker was better off six years ago when he was making $20 a week less and butter wasn't a dollar a pound.

The Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics also said the worker's dollar has been getting him less for his money year after year since 1939. The bureau uses the prewar year of 1939 in making its comparison of the present day worker's pay check and its buying power.

The figures showed that last June the average unmarried factory worker with no dependents made $49.37 a week, or $41.89 after taxes and Social Security deductions. This bought him $26.50 worth of groceries measured in 1939 dollars.

In 1941, the average worker made only $29.58—$28.05 after deductions—but on the basis of the 1939 dollar he could buy $26.51 in goods. In other words, he was better off by one penny.

The records show that factory workers boosted their pay checks more between 1943 and 1944 than at any time in the last eight years.

In 1943, the average worker was making $43.14 a week and in 1944 his check totaled $46.08. It fell to $44.39 in 1945 and to $43.74 in 1946. But it came on again in January of this year when widespread wage boosts raised it to $47.10.

It was estimated that the average wage for July, 1947, latest month for which preliminary figures are available, will be $49.25.

Falls Church Teen Agers Plan for Canteen

the Crossroads" scheduled for 8:30 p. m. in the school on September 25 through 27 will bring in more money.

Two businesslike girls, Tanya Bruskin and Shirley Cannon, raised $40 in three hours recently with a cake sale. Together, they also sold $153 worth of ads for play programs.

For future fund-raising operations, they hope to organize a minstrel show for a road tour, or give choir recitals for paid admission.

Parents Pitch In

Falls Church parents are pitching in to help, too. Contractor fred J. Stumpe, for example, has offered his assistance when building starts.

The Town Council is seriously considering donation of a city-owned lot, located at Lincoln ave. and Great Falls st., as a site for the teen canteen.

Attorney John G. Turnbull, whose son, Chris, is an active participant, has drawn up a non-profit corporation charter for the group.

And such groups as the Falls Church eterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Lions and Oddfellows have promised or already given their backing.

But as Mary Jo Lingley, vice president of the teen agers' fund drive group remarked wistfully: "$7000 sure is a lot of money."

Canada Removes Some Price Controls

Ottawa, Sept. 14 (AP).—Canada today removed wartime price controls from all commodities except sugar, meat, wheat, fats, dried fruit, iron, steel and tin.

Rent controls also were retained and the wartime prices and trade board said they would "outlive the remaining commodity controls."

The board announcement said the remaining controls on commodities would be removed when supply conditions justify the expectation "that no excessive disorderly price increases will occur."

Moscovites Travel To Harvest Potatoes

Moscow, Sept. 14 (AP).—Thousands of buses, trucks and trains were leaving Moscow today loaded down with citizens who are going into the country to help harvest the potato crop. During the past 10 days frosts have stopped further growth of potato plants and the Soviet press has urged that the crop be dug immediately while the soil is still dry.

Snake Cultists In Rites Shun Lye Faith Test

Hall Station, Ga., Sept. 14 (AP).—Fanatic hill folk groveled today in the dust of a backwoods clearing under exhortations of self-proclaimed evangelists, in clamoring and convulsive rites that bid the faithful to handle serpents and sometimes drink poison to confirm their salvation.

Floyd L. Fowler, farmer-preacher, led his overalled followers in open-air worship and then baptized several by "burial" beneath the waters of a gloomy, overhung creek.

Upward of 200 persons, including young children and mothers nursing infants, gathered last night beneath a giant oak in a pasture to hear feverish tirades by three rural preachers.

Two persons plunged their hands into a box of venomous snakes and lifted the squirming, hissing reptiles rapturously above their heads. But although they declared the Lord "was in" them, they ignored the mute invitation of a glass of water and can of household lye that stood on a dimly lighted table.

Some followers were goaded into religious frenzy by the windmill exhortations of Fowler and the Rev. Gordon Miller, and by the pulsating, voodoo-like rhythm of hand-clapping and wailing voices. These fell to their knees in the red-brown dust, weeping, whimpering, and lamenting in ecstatic anguish.

Several fell into hysterical convulsions, quivering, heaving and panting in agitated rapture. Eventually, they staggered to their feet, reeling and trembling, to participate again in the tumultuous jubilation.

Two weeks ago, a hysterical follower quaffed poison at a similar gathering, was seized with retching spasms, and later died. Miller, itinerant textile worker-preacher, of the "Free Church of God," was freed of manslaughter charges when a Georgia judge ruled it was not illegal to carry poison.

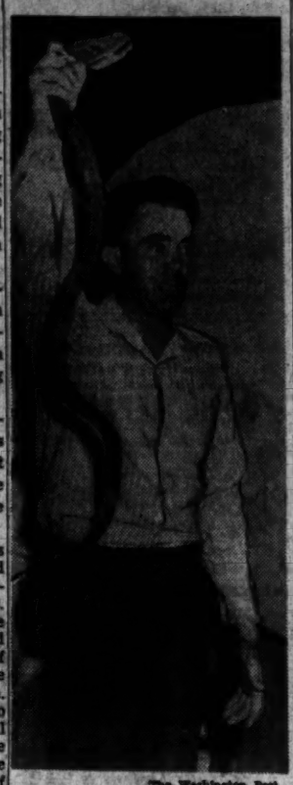
Miller said the Lord had vindicated him and shouted: "I bless God. Bless His name. I can feel that virtue from heaven. They are vilifying a man of God, but they had better bridle their tongues."

Pointing to the box of reptiles, he shouted, "They cliify that box. Praise God, it ain't that box they're afraid of. I can take these serpents out and you won't be afraid to put your hand in it. Thank the Lord, it's the serpents they're afraid of, but I ain't afraid 'cause I got the spirit of the Lord in me.

"Bless God, I'd rather preach in a place like this than in any church, so the word of God can be free."

Miller said he would preach a week hence at Lyerly, Ga., in the same brush arbor where Ernest Davis, 33, took poison to prove his faith and died.

Freed Pastor Wields Snake



The Washington Post

THE REV. GORDON MILLER of Hall Station, Ga., wields a large snake at services after being freed of manslaughter charges in the poison drinking death of a follower of his sect. Miller said the Lord directed him to take up serpents at the meeting. He was indicted after the death of Ernest Davis, who drank poison at a religious service

"in well-organized commando raids."

This ignited Moslem retaliation against Sikhs and Hindus in Pakistan, which led to Hindu attacks against Moslems in India and burst finally into the bitter fratricidal turmoil that blighted the first weeks of hard-won independence.

Ispahani will present his credentials to President Truman as soon as the Chief Executive returns to Washington. The new Ambassador arrived in Washington Friday.

Capital Welcomed

Asked if the new nation planned to seek an American loan, he retorted:

"If we have to borrow, we shall borrow."

Then he announced that "Pakistan will welcome American and other foreign capital," but would resist "exploitation."

"It must be accepted by all, left or right, that the days of exploitation in the narrow sense are over," he said. "So long as foreign capital gets a reasonable return and is satisfied with that, it is most welcome."

He said that Pakistan "does not use any Russian designs" in view "at present," and made clear that "we shall not countenance designs of anyone."

Married and the father of three, two sons and a daughter, Ispahani said he planned to bring his family to this country "as soon as I can find the accommodations," with conditions as they are, he added, it "can't possibly be this year."

Paper Plant Set Afire

New Delhi, Sept. 14 (AP).—A mob set fire today to the printing plant of the Moslem newspaper Dawn, principal mouthpiece of the Moslem population of the Dominion of India.

It was one of a series of continuing incidents in the twin cities of New and Old Delhi in what appeared to be a developing "war of nerves" between embattled Sikhs and Hindus on one side and the Moslems on the other.

Public Influence

In addition to the specific reforms which appear to be emerging from the recent scrutinizing of police activities, we think that this favorable outcome is significant for another reason. It indicates how the citizens of even this voteless community can make their influence felt. The information that the police were concealing a large number of crime reports from the public came to The Washington Post from citizens who were interested in seeing a proper system of crime reporting established. Our news department conducted an investigation, found the complaints to be justified and published its findings. Other civic agencies became interested in the cause, and a group of Senators almost succeeded in getting authorization for a senatorial investigation after quizzing police and District officials. In the face of this public clamor action became imperative and the Police Department went to work, with the aid of the FBI, to modernize its crime-reporting methods.

We think this sequence of events indicates that citizens and civic agencies can bring about improvements in the administration of public affairs in the District if they adopt effective methods. With Senator Cooper announcing that he still believes there is need for a thorough investigation of the police to make certain that "modern and efficient" methods are employed throughout the department, further opportunity for the proper employment of informed public opinion in this field may be at hand a few months hence.

Omens In Greece

The new Sophoulis-Tsaldaris coalition in Greece appears to have won an auspicious victory in the reported surrender of nearly a thousand of the guerillas who had been operating in Macedonia under Communist direction. The surrenders are said to have taken place immediately after the amnesty guarantees, proclaimed by the new government, went into effect. If the reports are true, other large scale surrenders are almost certain to follow; and thus the prospect for peace and the hopes of reconstruction in Greece seem to be brighter today than at any time since the beginning of the crisis.

The curious thing is that sudden improvement should have occurred under a government comprised of such mutually suspicious and antagonistic elements. It is no great secret that the Populist Party, which is really the Royalist Party, and the Liberal Party, which is the heir of the Venizelist republican movement, were brought together only by persistent pressures exerted on them by Mr. Dwight Griswold, head of the American Aid Commission, and Mr. Loy Henderson, head of the Near Eastern division of the Department of State. This was in itself an abrupt departure from the previous American diplomatic policy in Greece, inherited from the British, which had been to support the Royalists in their program of pacification by the consolidation of their own power over the army and the police.

The insistence of the Messrs. Griswold and Henderson upon a government of national unity, to include both Royalists and Liberals, and if possible the lesser parties, as the only possible way of easing the exacerbated political passions, was attended by no little risk. It brought down upon them at once the anger and enmity of both the extreme Left and extreme Right. Two weeks of negotiation were required before the Liberal Sophoulis and the Populist Tsaldaris could be brought into any agreement that could be made the basis of a coalition government. In these two weeks the tensions among parties and factions became acute, and the fate of Greece appeared more and more uncertain. It was the politically and psychologically propitious moment for the long anticipated attack by the Communist forces that Marshal Tito had been assembling in Albania and Yugoslavia.

But for reasons still mysterious the attack did not develop. Late last week, however, rumors began to fly through Greece of warfare in Yugoslavia between the Communist forces and the remnant of General Mihailovich's Chetniks greatly strengthened by deserters from Tito's army, said to number scores of thousands and to possess a considerable quantity of arms. Intermittent artillery fire has been heard and explosions and conflagrations are said to have been observed by soldiers of Greek garrisons along the Yugoslav frontier. These rumors are still so vague and fragmentary that not much importance can be attached to them, but to some devout Greek minds they have served to recall a prophecy by the Archbishop of Athens that Greece would be delivered from the Communist danger by a miracle.

Aid For Work

Senator Young of North Dakota has come back from Europe with an impression which we may be sure will be echoed by other travelers among the sizable group of legislators in Europe. This is that the European does not work anything like as hard as the American. In our view, the trouble is not so much low productivity as misdirected (in terms of European recovery) activity. Yet the impression of loafing is understandable and is gained from surface contacts, as, for instance, at the stores. Congressmen in search of souvenirs of their trip find the doors locked at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Their curiosity is immediately piqued. And wonder is added to curiosity when they hear of beaches packed by long vacationers, offices deserted by drawnout weekending. Nothing impressed American officials at the peace parley in Paris last summer more than the spectacle, observable from their hotel office windows, of the army of Parisians who took to the wheel as soon as Friday dawned. On top of this seeming slackness, the scene in Europe is littered with spivs, form-filers in the top-heavy bureaucracies and black marketers. These matters nowadays take on a significance to the observers from this side of the ocean. For the people of Europe are nourishing great expectations of a share of the plenty which comes from the industry of our American farms and factories.

The first and foremost way in which western Europe can retrieve its economic fortunes is, of course, by working harder. It is as simple as that. But of all the countries in western Europe only Italy seems to have a noticeable vitality, though how the Italians are able to live at all on the thinnest shoestring in western Europe is a baffling mystery. The industry of the Italian is innate, not the product of exhortation. Conditions are different and less encouraging in France and England. There has been a lack of leadership, for the Socialists of both countries seem to have come to office on promises of the blessings of idleness, and no politician likes to swallow his own nostrums. This, however, he is now being forced to do in France and Britain. The trouble is that he is not being taken very seriously. The miners of England, for instance, don't mean to sacrifice the five-day week without a struggle. In France, the Communists find ready converts to their go-slow campaign among workers who have cherished the pledges of the pleasures and fruits of leisure.

Another deterrent to a full day's work, curiously, is full employment. There is no crisis feeling in western Europe because pay envelopes are full and enough rations (at present) are forthcoming. Crisis in the traditional sense arises from the absence of jobs. But the fear of unemployment has been in great part removed by government planning or by government aid. Few men, at least in the manual occupations, work for the fun of it, and even in Argentina an alarm has been sounded because a regime of full pay and virtually guaranteed work has made for absenteeism. Perhaps there is a warning here for the Wallaceites who advocate job security for all. Be that as it may, the London Economist is constrained to comment, "A moderate degree of unemployment would, in fact, be a godsend, since there is nothing else that will get labor for the mines, for the textile industries, and for agriculture, and that will really clear the way for exports."

However, we cannot throw up our hands over the fate of Europe as a result of the contrasts that our visiting legislators are noting. The question is not one solely of charity. It has to do with the fact that these people are situated on the accesses to our continent and are custodians with ourselves of our civilization. In other words, the issue is connected with our national security. That in itself calls for patience and tolerance, though both qualities will come naturally if we bear in mind what western Europe has been through. The best aid that we can render in the interests of western Europe as well as ourselves is backing for a self-help program that will go to the roots of European reconstruction, and we have no doubt that this will be the consensus of the peregrinating legislators.

European Union

Last week a body called the European Parliament was in session at Gstaad, Switzerland. This Parliament, according to its own literature, was summoned "with the aim of uniting Europe by the will of its peoples, expressed by its freely elected representatives." The Parliament has no official—that is to say, no governmental—status. But perhaps it is quite right in supposing that it is representative of and responsive to popular will in all the European countries. For popular thought is proverbially more progressive and more daring than official thought. Governments tend always to lag, out of a conservatism which is actually nothing more than timorousness, behind the peoples for whom they presume to speak.

There is some rather impressive evidence to this effect in the results of a survey conducted by the secretary general of the European Parliament, Count Richard Coudenhove-Kalergi. He addressed the following question to the members of a dozen official parliamentary bodies of European countries: "Are you in favor of a European federation within the framework of the U. N. O.?" He received expressions of opinion from only 1492 of the 4094 legislators. But it is significant, is it not, that of these 1450 answered "yes," while only 42 said "no"? Stated differently, 35 per cent of all those questioned said they favored a European federation, only 1 per cent expressed opposition.

From the British House of Commons, for example, from 587 members, came 132 votes of approval as compared with no more than 3 dissents. In the French National Assembly the score was 294 to 5—out of a possible 598. The Belgian Chamber of Deputies, with 202 members, recorded 95 for federation, only 1 against. It is a curious thing that so many informed persons who talk about European federation or about world federal union as wise and necessary and ultimately certain to develop pretend that it is impossible at present to do anything to hasten this desired consummation—because, they say, public opinion wouldn't stand for it. Perhaps public opinion is a good deal further advanced than these faint-hearted diviners of it suppose. Perhaps even the statesmen, confronted with concrete proposals for union (instead of the tiresome shibboleth that it is unattainable) would actually move to attain the solid foundation upon which the solution of all other world problems must rest.

Half Enough Houses

The recent hearings by the joint Senate-House Committee on Housing emphasize once more the extremely complicated nature of our housing problem. No one contends that the Nation's housing requirements are being adequately met. And even if enough materials and labor were available to supply 1,500,000 new homes each year (the expert estimate of our current national need), the people could not begin to buy or rent all of them because of high prices. The problem involves, therefore, not only a great expansion in volume but also a notable reduction in prices.

Distinction must be made between emergency housing problems resulting largely from wartime shortages and long-range problems which require a difficult approach. Most of the immediate difficulties stem from shortages of material such as nails, soil pipe, gypsum and lumber. Nails, the experts told the joint committee, are a low-profit item which the steel companies are not producing in sufficient volume. This ought to be a matter for reasonable adjustment within the steel industry. Since it has continued without correction for more than two years after the war, however, Congress may well consider steps to encourage or compel the production of the more critically short materials.

More baffling are the long-range problems. Some of the experts claim that building costs could be reduced by 5 to 10 per cent by the adoption of modern building codes. This will require not only the modification of antiquated building codes in 2000 cities, but also the modification of laws in 31 States. Formidable as that task is, however, we think progress can be made much faster than it has been made in the past. This condition has existed for many years. Experts have been aware of it and have done a great deal of work to correct it. What is now needed is a drive to bring about the desired code changes. We cannot help thinking that a concerted movement for this purpose, with the cooperation of real estate boards, the building materials industry and organized labor, could bring about prompt legislative action.

Certainly a concerted attack is also needed on the shortage of building labor. The Census Bureau showing that the average age of masonry trades workers is from 52 to 55 indicates a shocking failure to bring new blood into an important industry. Here again the situation calls for a candid facing of facts and prompt, corrective action whatever the causes of this industrial hardening of the arteries may be.

One sample of what may be done by private initiative is the announcement that the Producers Council, the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association and about 40 other cooperative business associations have developed a standardized dwelling design to eliminate waste and reduce the cost of home construction. It is not a one-type model home that this group is promoting, but a general use of four-foot lengths in building materials and multiples of this length so as to permit the maximum use of factory-cut materials. Such standardization, it is said, will result in substantial savings wherever these materials of uniform measurement can be used.

When all possible economies have been effected, however, decent housing will still be beyond the reach of millions of American families now living under wretched conditions. Legislation to inaugurate a long-range public housing program in connection with slum clearance seems to us to be an indispensable part of any plan that a legislative group may devise.

MOUNT ARARAT

Austere and lonely
the mountain rises
in the still air.
its peak is crowned with sun-touched clouds;
their weird shadows lie
over the giant glaciers.

An eagle soars about the summit, distant and aloof.
Such piecely golden eyes as his looked down in ages past upon the ark from which he flew.

Pennsylvania Vote

The recent interest in the Pennsylvania District because of anti-Taft-Hartley candidates presents a fallacy. Though Allentown, the largest city in Lehigh County is in a greatly industrialized section of Pennsylvania, it is hardly the ideal example for a test of the power of labor. Allentown is at the center of the county of 177,533, and has the population itself of 97,000. The community of Allentown, therefore, makes up half the possible vote. It is not true, consequently, to state that the past vote is representative of the labor strength because the largest area in the population count is not a good example of an industrialized and unionized area. There is a great abundance of nonunion white collar workers, representative of the industries in favor of the bill, who could vote according to the necessity of favoring their jobs.

A much truer test will be seen when the elections are held in Northampton County, that county neighboring Lehigh. Northampton County houses Bethlehem Steel, Ingersoll Rand, Lehigh Foundry, Taylor Wharton Steel equipment, and over fifty textile plants. There remain very few of these factories and establishments which are not unionized. The population of the county is only 7000 less than Lehigh, but the test of the real union member's attitude would be brought out much more clearly. The county seat of Easton is much smaller than Allentown, but it houses several textile plants, chemical establishments, and is highly unionized.

The Taft-Hartley Act is something which must be considered carefully, and any false experiments or delusive conclusions such as the Allentown election would prove an expensive mistake to some interested people.

"Psychiatric Clinic"

In your issue of September 11, there is a communication from a citizen who attempts to invalidate the obvious good being done by The Washington Post is calling attention to psychiatric disorders and the establishment of a psychiatric clinic. I am not in agreement with any such statements, and would like to commend your straightforward efforts to better our civilization by meeting this problem, which is decidedly a grave one, in an open manner.

I would like to refer all others who have the same beliefs as the writer of the aforementioned letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association, August 30, 1947. An article by Dr. Joseph T. Wearn contains the following information: "More than one half of all the hospital beds in this country are occupied by patients who are mentally ill; more than one fourth of the annual operating budget of New York State is now devoted to caring for the mentally ill; of some 15 million men examined by Selective Service, 1,875,000 were rejected on the ground of neuropsychiatric disorders. This represents 37 per cent of the men rejected for all causes; and even after the initial screening, 39 per cent of all medical discharges from the Army between January, 1942 and December, 1945 were classified as psychoneuroses."

I am quite sure that the above indicates a definite need for competent, intelligent handling of psychiatric patients, many of whom are indigent. It is my fervent hope that in the near future, methods of diagnosis and treatment will be able to give more and better relief to patients suffering from conditions which to them are painfully real.

European Self-Help

Even a school child knows the importance of coal to industry, and scattered over the front pages of every newspaper in the country is the story of Britain's striking miners. In addition to this Bevin wants everything we have from Fort Knox gold to postwar lend lease. The whole thing is brazen and unthinkable and we had better do some constructive thinking now and carry out those constructive ideas next November at the polls.

In The Washington Post of September 10, Senator Young, Republican of North Dakota, and just back from a trek to Europe where he attended the meeting of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization in Geneva, says he was surprised at "how little the people of Europe work." Workers in France have a three-day weekend; throughout Europe a two-hour lunch period is common.

Our forefathers wrapped bags around their frost-bitten and swollen feet at Valley Forge, and rationed parched corn that a new Nation could live and a new concept of freedom be born. Let Europe follow the example of those courageous men and pull out of her own tailspin. We have done more than enough.

"Wedemeyer's Advice"

Reference is made to Mr. Emmanual Larsen's letter, entitled "Wedemeyer's Advice," appearing in The Washington Post of September 11—actually a criticism of Mr. George Marvin's letter bearing the same title.

I, for one, think Mr. Marvin's letter was a compact and cogent statement of the situation in China. It was anything but feeble. His opinions are widely supported by qualified observers whose names and whose works are reputable and readily available.

The fact is that the present government of China is insupportable because of its oppressiveness, ineptitude and ancient corruption. Though not fully expressed in his criticism, Mr. Larsen's attitude seems plain—fight communism by any means. This is also apt to mean fighting communism at any cost. I and a great many other citizens take issue at this point.

In fighting communism we must not ever be prevented by prejudice from counting the cost, whether the prejudice be class, clerical, or national. The cost may be our democracy. It may be the destruction of our civilization. It may be the suicide of man. That it may mean the violent death of our loved ones and ourselves is a lesser matter.

The risk may have to be taken. But only fools or fanatics will encourage that risk without acknowledging the direction of their argument and the eventualities they may in effect be proposing.

The effect of helping the present Chinese government, as Mr. Larsen urges, is to accelerate the impoverishment of American citizens and American resources while pushing us a long step closer to a ruinous war.

Margarine Tax

Your editorial of September 8 on the current tax reduction studies brings up a point too long neglected by this and other committees investigating the defects of our Federal taxation system.

You said: "Despite their objectivity, these studies expose the defects of the existing system of Federal taxation and the need for thoroughgoing revision to correct inequities and eliminate or modify taxes that hamper investment activity and discourage legitimate business risk-taking."

Can you think of a tax that typifies this statement more than the excise taxes and license fees put on margarine?

The Bureau of Internal Revenue taxes, license fees and restrictions on margarine do not even—and cannot—pretend to be revenue-producing measures. In 1946, the entire amount collected, including special taxes, was only $4,932,167.11. The taxes on margarine are a misuse of the Federal Government's tax privilege, for they are avowedly a means of "protecting" one industry by curtailing the activities of its competitor. The true source of this discriminatory tax system is revealed in the Dairy Record, mouthpiece of the dairy industry, which, in June, 1941, said:

"The dairy industry must set as its goal the complete extermination of oleomargarine. It must never rest until the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine has been outlawed in this country."

And, the Congress has allowed itself to be made party to this outspoken "outlawing."

If the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation is truly acting in the public interest, it will recommend immediate relief to consumers through repeal of the discriminatory taxation on margarine. For, if it is not an "inequity" to tax a much-needed food off American tables, the word has lost its meaning.

The Pure Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act already regulates margarine as it does all other foods, with some exceptions for butter—a dubious privilege won by the dairy lobby. This act guarantees proper labeling, fat content and purity. The assessment of taxes under the Bureau of Internal Revenue, it becomes clear, is a means of curtailing and stigmatizing a food which the Government itself recognizes as pure and nutritious, one of the "Basic Seven Foods."

Butter production has fallen almost 6 per capita pounds in the past decade and output is steadily decreasing. Thus far, margarine has been able to fill this gap in the American diet. Increased sales by manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers—aside from benefits to the consumer—would profit the Government in dollars and cents.

Due to Federal and State taxes, fees and restrictions, many wholesalers and retailers are unable to carry margarine profitably—at a time when the difference in price between nutritionally equal butter and margarine is about 60 cents per pound! If the Government means what it says about reducing the cost of living, it will make it possible for harried housewives to buy margarine without paying for the privilege, and without having to waste time and needed fats by hand-mixing the yellow coloring in the home kitchen.

Sincerely yours,
PAUL T. TRUITT, President
National Association of Margarine Manufacturers.

Hagiocracy

THE PURITAN OLIGARCHY, by Thomas Jefferson Wertenbaker. (Scribner's, $5.)

Most writers of history are, I take it, divisible into two general categories: those who are highly entertaining but somewhat inaccurate or uncritical, as, for example, Herodotus and Oliver Goldsmith, and those who are painstaking but somewhat tiresome, like so many of the contributors to the Cambridge Modern History. Now and then, however, our understanding of the past is enriched by an historian in whom critical scholarship, imagination and a sense of language are in some degree harmonized; and it seems to me that the field of American history can offer a contemporary example in Professor Wertenbaker. I am not suggesting that the professor is one of the great literary historians like Prescott or Parkman; the main purpose of his work, which is interpretive rather than purely narrative, almost disqualifies him for that. But the proof of his quality is in his ability to illumine what might seem rather unpromising subjects in such a manner as to make them of engrossing interest. The professor's manner of writing is neither eloquent nor academic; it is merely journalistic prose of the highest order; that is to say, it is smooth, simple, lucid and agreeable.

The present work is a third installment of his study of The Foundations of American Civilization; in other words of the various seventeenth and eighteenth century European elements out of which, under the catalytic influence of the New World, arose a culture in many respects unique. The preceding volumes dealt respectively with the middle and southern colonies, but this time Professor Wertenbaker has chosen to deal not with New England generally but merely with the Massachusetts Bay Colony, since it alone, as he says, affords a clear opportunity to examine the influence of the Puritan spirit on American life. The examination, however, begins with survey of social and economic conditions of the sixteenth and seventeenth century in the eastern English counties to which most of the Puritan colonists were native. The professor does not give much attention to the supposed relation between the Genevese theology and the mercantilist economics, explored by Tawney and others, but he does observe that this part of England was a center of the wool-weaving industry and an early stronghold of the rising middle class. He notes also the part played by Flemish and Huguenot refugees in the spread of the Calvinist doctrines, and incidentally the Flemish influence on early new England architecture. It becomes plain, however, that Congregationalism had had its origin as a constitutional theory of the Anglican Church, and that it was only by degrees, and mainly as the result of persecution, that it became a separatist, or secessionist, movement. It is also plain that the idea of religious toleration was no less abhorrent to the Puritan leaders than to Archbishop Laud himself; they deemed it indeed "the policy of Satan" and "the first born of all abominations." What they envisaged was a society of saints as ordained in the Scriptures, in which all doctrinal aberrations and all outward ungodliness must be rigorously suppressed.

They were, then, consistent, if not very far-sighted, in the banishment of heretics like Roger Williams and Mrs. Hutchinson and in the relentless persecution of Quakers and Baptists. It is necessary, of course, to remember that it was an age in which theological doctrines were espoused as passionately as some political theories are today and when men naturally kind and amiable could be driven by religious zeal to extreme barbarities. It was an age, too, when men were not merely willing to suffer for their beliefs but to find a positive joy in suffering. The Quakers especially thrived upon punishments; the prophetic ardor and missionary zeal among them doubled and redoubled with every whipping, mutilation and hanging, and their converts increased, reducing the little oligarchy divines and magistrates almost to despair. It is curious, observes Professor Wertenbaker, with contemporary insight, that in attempting to deal with the Quakers, the Puritans never thought of concentration camps. "Had they herded the missionaries and their converts off to some remote spot on the frontier and kept them under strict guard where they could not 'testify' to the people they might have had more success in preventing 'infection.'"

Nevertheless, it was the oligarchy which by its intransigence prepared its own downfall. The religious enthusiasm which had sustained the original colonists was necessarily diminished in succeeding generations. The insistence on outward conformity even in the absence of inner conviction, produced at length a psychological climate highly favorable to the secularist and rationalist ideas of the eighteenth century. The celebrated Salem witch trials, says Professor Wertenbaker, were subconsciously inspired by the desire of the clergy to regain their power over the public imagination against this rising tide of rationalism. Another and perhaps not less important factor was the decline of the village agriculture which the Puritan planners had adapted from the English manoral system and the multiplication of rural farms. The farmers and their families were removed from the unremitting vigilance of the clergy, and the life itself encouraged an individualistic spirit in all things. Thus those American principles, which had early manifestations in Old England, such as the separation of church and state, and the divorce of religion and public education, have their origin, not in the Puritan tradition but in the struggle against it.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The American Role

ROME, SEPT. 14.—The grave urgency of the economic crisis is the first and sharpest shock to the visitor to Rome. The time for action is very short. But when one has recovered from this first shock a second follows. This is the shock of learning the extraordinary importance, the far-reaching influence, of the American role in Italian internal politics.

No hasty traveler may venture to speak as an expert, yet it is perhaps permissible to draw firm conclusions from the discovery of virtually complete unanimity among political leaders of every coloration. Ministers amid the moth-eaten grandeur of their palazzo offices, left-wingers in grim little walk-up apartments, centrists and churchmen, rightists, technicians and journalists—all have made the same point, even the harassed, serious and high-minded Premier Alcide de Gasperi minced no words. Without hesitation, he stated that his government was "based on close links with the United States."

PREMIER DE GASPERI spoke nothing but the truth. To be sure, this last and most important chapter in the story of the growth of the American role in Italy has the kind of comically accidental beginning that might be expected, in view of the strong trace of sleep walking that tinctures American policy making.

Early last winter, De Gasperi was invited to a rally of statesmen held in Cleveland by the Luce Publications. The embassy here learned that De Gasperi was America-bound when he applied for a visa. Nevertheless, his trip to the United States was quickly given a semiofficial flavor. While he was in Washington, William McChesney Martin and other Export-Import Bank directors were bludgeoned into making a hundred million dollar loan for Italian industrial reconstruction.

And De Gasperi returned with his character as pro-American leader strongly accentuated.

Then came the crisis which led to the formation of the present De Gasperi government. The main issue was whether to continue the previous system of a government of all parties, including the Communists, or to establish a regime not subject to Communist sabotage. Point one on the Communist program was to remain in the government and continue to promote chaos.

IT CAN NOW BE STATED on absolute authority that De Gasperi gained courage to form his government without the Communists from positive assurances of American support given to him by official representatives of our Government. His parliamentary majority is slender and he has tried repeatedly and is still trying to broaden his governmental base by including non-Communist left-wingers. Our representatives have continued to take the position, with unqualified frankness, that liberalization of the regime was extremely desirable, but that the United States could do little for an Italy with Communists in the cabinet.

In the present crisis, the highest members of the government have informed this correspondent without equivocation, that they can survive if we in the United States make good our promises of support. Equally, they have admitted that the government must fall if the dollar famine and resulting import famine are permitted to reduce Italy to a condition of cruel unemployment and widespread starvation. "We cannot last if we cannot give our people bread," is the leitmotif.

Nor does the American role end there. Ivan Matteo Lombardo, a leading Socialist of the main, Nenni wing of the party, recently negotiated in Washington the settlement of American war claims against Italy. He returned to an important movement for Socialist independence of the Communists. The movement is promising, but will admittedly come to nothing if want of dollars now plunges Italy into conditions of despair. Even the present sharp Communist offensive against the De Gasperi government (of which more later) is obviously motivated, at least in part, by a desire to strike before large-scale American aid stabilizes the Italian situation.

ALL THIS ADDS up to a staggeringly heavy responsibility for the makers of American policy, clearly a Congress dubiously ornamented by such fiddle-headed statesmen as Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire cannot be induced to take action overnight, even in the present emergency. But the certainty of an Italian ration cut at the end of October is conditional on the need to conserve some food for the Italian people through the winter.

If the Italian government receives firm enough assurance of future aid, it can expend its existing stocks immediately. The whole of the American 130-million-dollar grant in aid for Italy can also be poured out during the months directly ahead. Decent conditions can thus be maintained until January. This gamble, coupled with a special session of Congress to provide additional funds to meet the European emergency, appears to be the only course open. Now that America is the leader, America must lead.

Officials Say More Planes Needed by U.S.

By the United Press

President Truman's Air Policy Commission is expected to be told at hearings beginning today that national security requires a four-fold increase in combat plane production and a like increase in the number of transport planes in use.

In the present state of world affairs, military and industry officials argue, there should be a minimum annual output of 5700 planes for the Air Force and Navy air arm. The present rate of production is between 1300 and 1400 annually.

To back up the combat force, there should be 5000 transport planes available for use in an emergency, the bulk of them in service on commercial airlines, according to C. R. Smith, chairman of the board of American Airlines, who will appear before the commission tomorrow.

1000 Now in Use

Smith, a wartime major general and deputy commander of the Air Transport Command, recently told the American Legion's national aeronautics committee that there are about 1000 transports in commercial use now and a few hundred more in the Air Force and Navy.

Hearings before the Presidential unit, headed by Thomas K. Finletter, New York attorney began today with testimony of Admiral Emory S. Land, president of the Air Transport Association, airlines organization.

To Outline Views

Land, assisted by Robert Ramspeck, ex-Georgia congressman and ATA executive vice president, and Brig. Gen. Milton W. Arnold, vice president in charge of engineering and technical matters, is expected to outline a airline views on present aviation laws, needed safely measures, multiple taxation and air transportation's place in nationl defense.

The airlines will place heavy emphasis on the need for safety aids along the airways and at airports. Congressional committees urgently recommended installation of these aids last winter after a series of crashes. But money for only a small proportion of the total proposed was appropriated in the spring.

Sabath Fears Foreign Policy Leads to War

By the United Press

Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), ranking Democrat on the powerful House Rules Committee, said yesterday that he was very much afraid the Administration's foreign policy "will drive us into World War III."

In a radio interview on Ed. Hart's Forum, over Station WINX, the normally pro-Administration Sabath bitterly assailed the plan of Secretary of State George C. Marshall for European reconstruction. He charged it was conceived by Former President Herbert Hoover and "those around Marshall who represent Wall Streeters."

He said these interests "want to rebuild German industry and revive the German cartels."

Sabath's foreign policy statement came as he sent a letter to Attorney General Tom C. Clark demanding price investigations of the dairy, produce, fertilizer and grain industries and—"the most vicious of them all"—the meat-packing "trust."

Jail Sentences Demanded

Sabath said that, in addition, "it may also be well to give some attention to the textile and wearing apparel manufacturing industries." He urged Clark to call for jail sentences—not mere fines—on industrials found guilty of price manipulations.

During his broadcast, Sabath gave his views on a variety of subjects. Here's what he had to say about:

Foreign relief—"I am, of course, in favor of helping the needy of Europe, but we can't do it forever. They (Europeans) must help themselves. But instead, they are doing nothing and just relying on us.

Opposes Loyalty Probe

President Truman's loyalty probe—"I think this is a mistake. But the Republicans made this an issue, and President Truman had to meet it the best way he could. I think he now realizes there is no justification and no room whatever for this witch hunt."

He said the loyalty check was directed against the "foreign born who have always demonstrated their patriotism . . ." Sabath was born in Czechoslovakia.

Special session—He said he didn't favor a special session of Congress, because by the time various committees got ready for legislative action, "it would be well into December anyway."

Runaway Food Prices

By Mark Sullivan

The Impetus To Inflation

LISTENING TO THE RADIO Sunday morning, America heard reports of statements about high prices of food from prominent Americans—former Governor Stassen, Senator Ives of New York, Senator Baldwin of Connecticut, and former OPA heads Chester Bowles and Paul Porter. The preceding day newspapers carried a statement by Senator Taft. For Monday a Senate committee headed by Mr. Flanders of Vermont was scheduled to begin hearings on prices. All this is a partial record of an extremely serious condition, the whole record includes countless columns of newspaper space.

Sullivan

The focus of the phenomenon, so far as an economic hurricane of this kind can be said to have a single focus, was alluded to by Senator Ives. He said that unless someway is found to curb the upward spiral of food and other prices, he feared that the "bottom may drop out" as in 1929 and 1920-21. But in this kind of phenomenon the bottom does not drop out until after the lid has blown off. And what is under way just now is a growing volume and rapidly increasing tempo of upward forces. We are in an inflation.

Many of the current outgivings parallel Senator Ives' statement that if the spiral continues (which seems certain so far as the immediate future is concerned) "Congress will be forced to step in." That at least has the virtue of looking toward the future and toward cure. Most of the statements from men in political life are post mortem and partisan, Democrats putting blame on the Republicans and Republicans on the Democrats.

ABOUT ONE POLICY of Government which has a part in the upward spiral, both parties seem comparatively silent. One rarely, so far as this writer has seen, do men in political life allude to the Government policy of "price support" for farm products, food. Reticence about this might be explained by reluctance to speak against the interest of farmers as a class, who are beneficiaries of price support. Another reason for comparative absence of discussion is that the Government mechanisms for supporting prices are so intricate as to be not easy to understand.

Without overemphasizing the part played in the inflation spiral by Government price support of farm products, and without differentiating too dogmatically between causes arising unavoidably out of the war or out of natural forces, and on the other hand causes arising directly out of specific acts of Government, nevertheless one statement remains tenable. Government support of prices of farm products stands today as a firmly held barrier against any general reduction of prices of food. Upon indication that the prices of a frm product my turn downward, the Department of Agriculture moves to prevent the drop.

Price support rests on statutes. One, enacted before the war aimed to assure to farmers "parity" prices—that is, prices for farm products having a relation to the prive level of goods generally. Othe statutes, enacted during the war, aimed to stimulate farmers to raise large quantities of food. To assure farmers against possible drops in prices at the end of the war, these statutes were made effective until the end of 1948. Under present conditions, in a time of rising prices, these statutes amount to an automatic mechanism preventing a fall in the price level of farm products, food.

The mechanism of the Department of Agriculture for preventing drops in prices of farm products is illustrated by the now rather well-know case of potatoes. The Department bought potatoes, permitted some that they bought to spoil made some inedible, and disposed of some for purposes other than food, such as manufacture of alcohol or starch. However, potatoes is the only crop as to which the Department has practiced destruction as part of the price support mechanism.

JUST NOW there is in prospect a drop in the prices of dried and tinned fruits, due to an accumulating glut. The Department is expected to prevent the drop, presumably by buying some of the surplus and selling it abroad or in ways other than sale to the general consumer.

There are price support mechanisms, varying in technique, for practically all farm products. This is one field in which Congress could act, by modifying the price support statutes in the light of a changed and dangerous condition. Demand for such action would be an effective activity on the part of a price-sick public.

Buck Predicts That Churchill Soon Will Regain Leadership

By The Associated Press

Senator Buck (R., Del.) predicted yesterday that Winston Churchill "before long" would regain Britain's leadership "and rally his people to do those things that should be done."

This means, he said, "to lower their living standards, in keeping with their income, to tighten their belts—to sweat and work. To return to their self-respect."

In a radio interview, Buck said he opposed another direct loan to Britain from this Government, except for food. He also said:

1. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation "won't be discontinued," but he indicated its powers may be reduced. He heads a forthcoming Senate Banking subcommittee "inspection" of the RFC. It will have in mind making the agency "responsible to Congress."

2. If the Marshall Plan to restore European stability means giving away "four or five billion dollars annually for as many years," there will be no chance to lower taxes "for years to come." Congress will want "all the facts" before it appropriates.

Asked whether "immediate aid should be given to Britain as the country that appears "nearest to tottering," Buck replied:

"I think Great Britain's first need is to put into power a government which can cope with the economic crisis it is said she faces. The present socialistic government seems to have botched the job."

Buck observed that spending in this country under Britain's last loan "has built up an artificial prosperity for us. While we sold the goods, in the last analysis we will pay for them out of taxes, higher taxes — unless England about faces and pays back on schedule, and I see no indication of that."

Asked whether Congress should "grant her more money," Buck demurred:

"The time has come to think of ourselves. The place for her to get money now is the Export-Import Bank or the International Bank. I say give no more direct loans from the United States taxpayers' pockets, unless they are needed to obtain food."

Questioned whether this should apply to the Marshall proposal also, Buck observed that Congress has not yet received from the Administration the details of "the State of affairs on the continent."

Russia Taking German Grain

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Neue Zeitung, official German newspaper of the American Military Government, reported today the Russians shipped out of Germany to the Soviet Union in the last fortnight 222 carloads of grain and 14 carloads of livestock.

The newspaper claimed that this represented "only a fraction" of what the Russians were actually taking out of Germany, "despite the fact that drought damage will force a cut in food rations for Germans."

American experts have estimated that the grain crop in the United States occupation zone had been damaged 20 to 40 per cent by drought. Losses nearly comparable were believed applicable to crops in the other three occupation zones.

The Neue Zeitung also reported that in the last two weeks there had arrived at Brest-Litovsk in the Soviet Union from Germany 38 railroad carloads of lumber, 40 carloads of railroad equipment, 35 carloads of machinery and 51 carloads of army goods.

Shipments out of the port of Rostock bound for Russia were reported to have included 28 carloads of automobiles and 40 carloads of railroad implements.

This was accompanied by a report in the British-licensed newspaper "Telegraf" that the Russians were using a "substantial" portion of their reparations goods from Germany for export in order to obtain foreign exchange.

Crisis in Bavaria

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 14 (AP).—The first government crisis in western Germany was reported by the American forces network tonight. The entire left of the center Social Democratic Party would walk out of the Bavarian government tomorrow.

Four cabinet members and three state secretaries will resign, the broadcast said, and the 54 Socialist members of the Bavarian parliament will call for a dissolution of the state legislature.

The Socialists, the network said, decided they had "no confidence in the speeches and promises of the Conservative Christian Social Union."

DPs Fearful Of Returning To Soviet Zone

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP).—The American Military Government today reported disappointing results in its plan to give displaced persons in the American occupation zone of Germany 60-day food rations as an incentive for returning to their homes.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, declared that "basic political differences and fear of reprisals or persecution" were deterring the majority of displaced persons still in Germany from returning to homes in the Soviet sphere of eastern Europe.

General Clay reported a sharp upward trend during June and July in the illegal border activities of Germans attempting to enter the United States zone from the east. During the two months 86,000 persons were turned back at the border and another 10,900 arrested.

The report said approximately 92,000 former Nazis still faced denazification proceedingse in the American zone.

Luebeck, Germany, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—A handful of Exodus 1947 Jewish refugees at Am Stau camp seized an interpreter late Saturday and beat him about the face and head with a wooden club, British officials revealed today.

Cigarette Fire Costly

Tokyo, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—Investigators today blamed a cigarette for the 20-million-yen ($1,333,333) fire which destroyed the Japanese Finance Ministry and most of its records last night. Officials said, however, that firefighters had succeeded in removing many important documents related to taxation and the national budget.

Qavam Ignores Oil Issue in Iran Program

Tehran, Sept. 14 (AP).—Premier Ahmed Qavam presented personally to the parliament today an eight-point legislative program that ignored entirely the hottest issue before the lawmakers—a decision on opening the rich oil resources of northern Iran to Soviet exploitation.

He demanded a vote of confidence based on the achievements of his 19-month-old regime and the legislative program.

Failure to include ratification of the proposed oil agreement with Russia in his legislative program came as a surprise. He made no mention also of approval by the parliament of the 25 million dollar credit extended by the United States for military expenditures.

Discussion of both issues were expected to begin in parliament on Tuesday, preparatory to taking a vote of confidence.

While Qavam made no mention of the proposed Soviet oil concession, he told the lawmakers that he had succeeded in establishing "friendly relations" with the Soviet Union by direct discussions with Moscow.

(The Moscow radio reported that the Iranian ambassador to the Soviet Union had left Moscow. There was no amplification of the report, recorded in London by the Soviet monitor.)

Arlington Man Found Shot Dead In Trailer Bunk

George Washington, 40, a laborer, was found shot in the head in his trailer at a camp at 2444 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va., yesterday.

Arlington County police were called to the trailer camp at 4 a. m. by another trailer occupant. They found Washington in his bunk in the trailer, shot in the head with a rifle bullet. Police said he lived alone in the trailer.

Arlington County detectives yesterday were seeking at least one man in connection with the shooting. They said the dead man was reputed to have had a sum of money in the trailer, but no money was found.

Chile Ends Control Over Anaconda Mine

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—The government ended military control over the Anaconda Copper Co.'s big Chuquichamata mine today with a decree which suspended the state of mergency in El Lota and ordered all troops back to their barracks.

The mine was seized September 10 after government mediators failed to persuade workers to submit their demands to arbitration. Though mine employes, influenced by Communist Jose Tomas Araya, refused arbitration, they returned to work when troops under Gen. Gilberto Urizar took over.

Cario Paper Calls U. S. Freedom's Enemy

Cairo, Sept. 14 (AP).—Al Kashkool, weekly newspaper of the Moslem Brotherhood in Egypt, said in an editorial in this week's edition the United States was mainly responsible for the United Nation's Security Council's failure to support Egypt's demands for withdrawal of British troops.

"Had the United States, enemy of freedom, supported the cause of freedom, China, Brazil and Colombia would have followed its lead. We then would have obtained a decision in our favor," it said.

Police, Firemen Quell Jail Riot

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 14 (INS).—Bridgeport police and firemen late today subdued a general uprising at the Fairfield County jail after prisoners rioted throughout Saturday night and Sunday.

Although reporters and photographers were refused admittance to the jail, the cause of the outbreak was said to be general unrest due to over crowding. Two policemen and two prisoners were injured before order was restored.

U. N. Called on To Aid Greece

"fidelity to the United Nations" which he said was "the cornerstone" of American foreign policy.

5.—Promised that American delegation would seek a United Nations success and not a United States success. He deplored the tendency of some to look on the U. N. as "a handy instrument for obtaining temporary national advantage."

6.—Proposed that the U. N. Charter be included inthe curriculum of all high schools and colleges.

7.—Warned that the U. N. will succeed or fail according to the conduct of its members and their willingness to "adjust their national policies to the common interest of all humanity."

8.—Predicted that the forthcoming Assembly meetings would initiate "a new phase in the life of the United Nations."

Marshall's willingness to consider some amendments to the charter came a few days after the United Press learned that the United States was willing to "consider" some modifications of the veto—possibly efforts to limit its use to enforcement action.

"We are not unalterably opposed to every proposal for a revision of the Charter," Marshall said . . . "while we might be willing to accept certain amendments to the Charter, we believe that rapid progress can be made in the immediate future within the general framework which we now have and that we shall ourselves make proposals for utilizing more fully existing machinery."

After reiterating United States fidelity to U.N., he asked, "What precisely does our support for the United Nations mean?" He answered by setting forth these rules of conduct for the United States which he said reflect this country's national policy:

"1. It means that we ourselves must faithfully live up to our obligations under the Charter.

"2. It means that our public acts must be consistent with the Charter, whether they are carried out through the United Nations or through other means.

"3. It means that we must refer to the United Nations problems which have failed of solution by other peaceful means and which require solution under the Charter.

Loyal Cooperation Urged

"4. It means that we must work persistently and loyally within the several organs and agencies within the United Nations toward the successful accomplishment of their assigned tasks.

"5. It means that we must seek to improve the procedures and machinery of the United Nations organization itself and to join with others in providing the resources which are necessary for its efficiency.

"6. It means that we must join with other members to make it unmistakably clear that aggression against the territorial integrity or political independence of others will be resisted by the combined efforts of the members of the United Nations.

"7. It means that we must exert every possible effort to conclude the remaining peace treaties, thereby creating the normal conditions under which the United Nations was designed to function. It was intended to maintain peace, not to make peace, after this war.

"8. It means that we join with others in seeking to improve the world's economic situation, to bring about the economic conditions necessary to international stability."

Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.) yesterday urged support of the majority report of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine, which proposes establishment of separate Jewish and Arab states in the Holy Land.

Wagner added that he was opposed to the minority report "because its proposed Federal state would actually convert Palestine into an Arab commonwealth in which Jews would be a permanent minority."

Text of Marshall's Speech to American Association for U. N. in New York

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Text of Secretary of State Marshall's speech to the American Association for the United Nations today:

I AM GLAD to participate in the opening of United Nations week.

The interest and the sense of public responsibility shown by the American Association for the United Nations and the scores of other national organizations who have joined in preparing this week of public education in the work of the United Nations is deserving of commendation. It should result in a deepened understanding of the purposes, the accomplishments and the difficulties of the United Nations and a more understanding determination on the part of the American people to make it succeed.

The General Assembly will convene at Flushing Meadow on Tuesday for its second regular session. Delegates from the 55 member states are now arriving in this country for this meeting. They will receive a warm and cordial welcome from our people who will follow their work with close and sympathetic attention. The Assembly will consider a number of unusually complex political problems, including those relating to Greece and Palestine, for which solutions must be found. There are already approximately 80 items on the agenda, with still others to be raised in the course of debate.

It is important that the peoples of the world should turn their eyes toward the United Nations while the General Assembly is in session. It is of particular importance that the people of the United States closely follow the proceedings and gain a full appreciation of the nature of the problems faced by the General Assembly. The broad outlines of our foreign policy are determined by our citizens. The American people, fortunately, are free to speak out on matters of policy. They vote; they form their own opinions; and they organize themselves into innumerable groups to give expression to their views. Through a free press and radio and through the film and other means of communications, they have full access to all shades of thought and opinion.

In order that the conclusions of the American public will be firmly based upon fact and upon mature reflection and realistic consideration of the issues involved, it is of importance that all sources of information and aids to the enlightenment of public opinion be used to the full. We are faced with policy questions which are baffling and far-reaching. Even when all the facts are available it is seldom easy to reach a decision with complete certainty that the right decision has been made. Without the facts, sound judgment of the issues is impossible.

This is why your endeavors deserve the support of all those who work for a peaceful world. The achievements of your organizations in the past have been truly remarkable. Without your help and the help of like-minded people in other parts of the world, the United Nations might not have come into existence. Without such continued help, it can only have a limited future. There is still much to be done and it is of utmost importance that it be done.

A RECENT survey of public opinion revealed that one out of three people in the United States still does not know what the United Nations is and what it does. The same study showed that only one in five knows what is meant by the veto.

The problem of creating a broad understanding of the many specific issues before the United Nations bodies is particularly great. The annual report of the secretary general to the General Assembly shows that from July 1, 1946, through June 30, 1947, the General Assembly held 443 plenary and committee meetings, the Security Council 347, the Economic and Social Council 168, the Trusteeship Council 56 and other United Nations bodies 897, or a total of 1911 meetings in one year. The most cursory glance at the subjects discussed at these meetings indicates that as Americans we are concerned with almost every topic dealt with. The entire range of our foreign policy is involved.

To do our share in the work of the United Nations the Government of the United States must operate as an effective team under the leadership of the President. Almost every department and agency of the executive branch of the Government is necessarily involved. Congress, too, is heavily involved in international matters and plays a determinant role in the implementation of our foreign policies from the financial point of view.

But the American public plays the decisive role. They set the objectives, they select the principal officers of government and they weigh and criticize results. That is the democratic process. If it is to be fully effective, the public needs leadership—not only the leadership of formally elected and appointed officers of government—but the leadership of informed and discerning men and women in each community throughout the country. This is preeminently the role of the organizations which are cooperating in this United Nations week.

The Department of State welcomes public scrutiny of its efforts and the criticism which helps us to check the wisdom of our actions. We try in every possible way to find out what the American public thinks about the great issues before us and to explain to them what we think and do about them. Many of you have participated in the regular meetings we have organized with representatives of national organizations.

Many of you have spoken to officers of the State Department, who are all available for consultation. Letters from organizations and individuals, which we received in great numbers, are carefully studied. No organization or individual expressing opinions or judgments on important public issues should conclude that such views are of no interest or assistance. The contrary is the case.

Let me urge you, therefore, that you continue throughout the year activities of the type which you have developed for this United Nations week.

We learned during the recent war that every household, every farm, every village and every business are deeply involved in the great problems of peace and security for the solution of problems, and the efforts to meet them in the United Nations, therefore require intelligent attention in all our schools, our churches, our civic, business and social organizations—wherever, in fact, citizens gather to discuss their vital interests.

WE AMERICANS must obtain a clear understanding of the role which we ourselves are called upon to play in the United Nations. We must understand the roles which others are playing or are failing to play. We must continually remind ourselves that the United Nations succeeds or fails according to the conduct of the members themselves and their willingness to act in accordance with the charter. We must become familiar with the terms of the charter. I think this might well be included in the curriculum of our high schools and colleges.

The limitations inherent in this great organization for the preservation of peace should be made clear to our citizens. We make a grave error to suppose that every international problem should be handled by the United Nations. Actually, this would neither be desirable nor practicable. The American Government, for example, is conducting negotiations continuously with every recognized government in the world on hundreds of subjects. Other governments are doing the same. The great majority of these matters are satisfactorily settled by mutual agreement between the parties directly concerned. Nothing would be gained and much would be lost by complicating the procedures of day-to-day negotiation by multiplying machinery where simple methods suffice.

Even in cases of international disputes the continuance of which might endanger the maintenance of peace and security—in other words, in matters of primary interest to the United Nations—the charter enjoins the parties first of all to seek solution by negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means of their own choice. Clearly this means that parties to disputes should use such peaceful means in good faith and in a spirit of mutual accommodation. Recourse to United Nations agencies in such matters may constitute an abuse of the Charter if the purpose be merely to better a bargaining position, to obtain a larger forum for propaganda, or to create greater rather than less international friction. Ultimately, of course, the United Nations is there and should be freely used where a basis for agreement does not exist and action or advice of the United Nations is needed for the maintenance of good relations.

Those who would understand its functions must also be aware of the part which is to be played by the specialized agencies which are now being related to the United Nations under the general coordination of the Economic and Social Council. These agencies are designed to encourage international cooperation in specific fields; they are not, in general, agencies with extensive resources of their own or with direct responsibility for the execution of policy within the United Nations, although some have important operating functions.

Some of them, such as the International Labor Organization, have long histories of accomplishment in the international field; others, such as the proposed International Trade Organization, to be considered at the forthcoming International Trade Conference in Havana in November of this year, are very young indeed. Others, such as the International Refugee Organization, are envisaged as temporary agencies to be disbanded, when a particular job is done. The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund are agencies with direct operational responsibilities in a particular field.

I have touched upon these matters merely as reminders that an intelligent participation by the United States in the United Nations requires persistent effort by our citizens and by organizations such as yours. I will turn now to relation between the United Nations and the foreign policy of the United States.

The President and other responsible Americans have on many occasions declared that support for the United Nations is the cornerstone of our foreign policy. On this we are a united people—without party or regional differences.

OUR "FIDELITY to the United Nations," to use the words of the President in his recent address to the Inter-American Conference at Rio—goes deep. Our faith in the United Nations has its roots in the basic moral values and spiritual aspirations of the American people. These aspirations of ours are identical with the purposes and principles of the Charter. The late President Roosevelt had this in mind when he spoke of freedom of speech and expression, freedom of worship, freedom from want, and freedom from fear—everywhere in the world.

How do we translate these general principles into practical terms? What precisely does our support for the United Nations mean?

First, it means that we ourselves must faithfully live up to our obligations under the Charter.

Second, it means that our public acts must be consistent with the Charter, whether they are carried out through the United Nations or through other means.

Third, it means that we must refer to the United Nations problems which have failed of solution by other peaceful means and which require solution under the Charter.

Fourth, it means that we must work persistently and loyally within the several organs and agencies within the United Nations toward the successful accomplishment of their assigned tasks.

Fifth, it means that we must seek to improve the procedures and machinery of the United Nations organization itself and to join with others in providing the resources which are necessary for its efficiency.

Sixth, it means that we must join with other members to make it unmistakably clear that aggression against the territorial integrity or political independence of others, will be resisted by the combined efforts of the members of the United Nations.

Seventh, it means that we must exert every possible effort to conclude the remaining peace treaties, thereby creating the normal conditions under which the United Nations was designed to function. It is intended to maintain peace, not to make peace, after this war.

Eighth, it means that we join with others in seeking to improve the world's economic situation, to bring about the economic conditions necessary to international stability.

These are clear rules for our conduct; in fact, they accurately reflect our national policy.

We have heard in this country, particularly in recent months, expressions of concern about the future of the United Nations. I do not believe that it stems from lack of confidence in the possibilities of the United Nations organization or in its technical efficiency. This apprehension is caused rather by doubt as to whether all members are willing to adjust their national policies to the common interest of all humanity. This common interest is expressed in article after article of the Charter enjoining its members to pursue in their international conduct the principles and purposes of the Charter. I can of cofrse, speak only for the United States. I have, I hope, made it clear that our national policies will continue to conform to these principles and purposes. Obviously, if all members do not similarly strive to meet their obligations under the Charter, the United Nations will be imperiled.

The forthcoming session of the General Assembly may begin a new phase in the life of the United Nations. During the course of this session, on October 24, the second anniversary of the coming into force of the Charter will be celebrated. These two years have, to a very considerable extent, been taken up with the work of organization and with the development of techniques and procedures. With the establishment of the Trusteeship Council in March and April of this year, the major organizational development of the United Nations was completed.

DURING these two years of birth and growth, governments and peoples have been slow to criticize and have shown commendable sympathy toward the initial efforts of this new world organization for peace and security. That initial period is coming to an end. Our work will now be subjected to more critical examination. Apprehension and anxiety over the future of the United Nations reflect insecurity about the aims and intentions of the members themselves. There is genuine danger that our hopes of two years ago will give way to skepticism.

The General Assembly is the forum in which this skepticism must be forestalled and the forum in which our disagreements must be resolved. The great moral and political forces of the peoples of the world must somehow be brought to bear with full effect through the General Assembly.

Within a few days time the United States delegation will be making a number of proposals to the General Assembly which we believe will help to resolve some of the issues which are now disturbing good relations among nations. You will appreciate that presentation of these proposals must await the meeting of the Assembly. However, I believe you will be interested in two or three general considerations which bear upon our work in the coming General Assembly.

We are not unalterably opposed to every proposal for a revision of the Charter although we believe that there is at the present time no need for major revisions of the Charter or for a change in the general character of the United Nations.

Many articles of the Charter have not yet been brought into play and given life and meaning by practical application. None of the principal organs as yet has fully exerted the authority and influence which are possible under the existing Charter. The members themselves as represented in the General Assembly have by no means exhausted the potentialities of the Chater in finding ways and means of overcoming obstruction and of meeting their common problems. While we might be willing to accept certain amendments to the Charter, we believe that rapid progress can be made in the immediate future within the general framework which we now have and that we shall ourselves make proposals for utilizing more fully existing machinery.

In the meantime, there are serious matters in the political and security field which require prompt action by the Assembly. We are particularly concerned with the aid and assistance which are being provided by Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania to the guerillas in Greece—a direct threat to the territorial integrity and political independence of that country.

We seek nothing in that situation but the protection of the Greek people which is their due under the Charter.

We have no interest beyond the pacification of that troubled area.

The solution must be the cessation of the threat—and we earnestly hope that the General Assembly will be able to devise means for accomplishing that end.

The matter of Palestine will be before the forthcoming Assembly for solution. We believe that the techniques which have been used by the Assembly thus far in dealing with this question have been soundly conceived. After preliminary consideration, the General Assembly established a commission of representatives of disinterested states which has inquired into the problem and reported its conclusions and recommendations to the Assembly. We believe that it is of the greatest importance that every effort be made to obtain maximum agreement in the General Assembly on a solution for that problem and that the peoples directly concerned will accept the recommendations of the coming General Assembly as a basis for a definitive solution of this complex matter.

THROUGHOUT the General Assembly the United States delegation will be motivated by a desire to develop the United Nations as the central organization for the maintenance of international peace and the promotion of international cooperation. We do not look upon it as a handy instrument for obtaining temporary national advantage. We have no desire to slip back upon the road to international anarchy out of which we have been hoping we are beginning to emerge. We look forward to the early admission into the United Nations of the remaining nations who might now be qualified for membership. If the United Nations is to serve the genuine self-interest of all members over the longer period and if it is to be, as suggested in Article 1 of the Charter, a center for harmonizing the actions of nations, we believe that its world-wide membership must be preserved as far as possible in accordance with its original design.

It would be a sore, a tragic disappointment if experience should prove that the harmony which was achieved at San Francisco was only temporary. We find it difficult to believe that members of the organization would deliberately seek to destroy its structure by persistence in acts of aggression or by obstruction of a nature to paralyze the principal organs of the organization.

Our own attitude and sense of responsibility will have much to do with the success of the coming General Assembly. Under the pressure of our war effort we developed in this country a laudable impatience for obstacles which stood between us and the attainment of victory, obstacles which were removed by an application of astonishing energy, ingenuity and singleness or purpose. The problems of peace require moral courage and stern determination, but they also demand patience and deliberation if we are to find a common agreement upon which a lasting peace can be found.

In reflecting upon our own experience, the American constitutional development, we find that even where we were one people and there were generally agreed objectives, a long time, much forbearance and a willingness to compromise were needed in building our great constitutional system. We believe that the peoples of the United Nations also have common basic purposes which provide the foundation for effective machinery for international cooperation. We should be neither surprised nor discouraged if time and great effort are required to move forward. We hope that the effort itself will produce increasing unanimity of purpose, a unanimity which will in turn make possible more effective international action.

The United States delegation to the General Assembly will have continually in mind the basic purposes of the American people and will strive to give them effect. We seek at this Assembly not a United States success but a United Nations success. The latter will include the former since our objectives are the objectives of the Charter itself. We earnestly solicit your backing for this great effort in which we are engaged.

Bulgaria Protests Border Incidents

Fate in Balance

This Week Crucial for Paris Talks

Paris, Sept. 14 (INS).—Delegates to the Marshall Plan talks said tonight this coming week will be a crucial one in the effort to bring the final European economic report into line with United States views.

Some conference circles regard the American sovereignty, and at least four delegations—the Swiss, Norwegian, Danish and Swedish—are expected to ask their governments for new instructions.

The delegates generally recognized that success or failure of the Marshall Plan hangs in the balance.

They believe failure might not only be a fatal blow t othe Marshall Plan itself, but also may compromise any interim aid the United States may offer to tide desperate nations over the winter.

The insistence by U. S. Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs William Clayton on further revision of the final draft of the European balance sheet surprised some delegates.

Until Friday, when the British were understood to have come around to the American way of thinking, these delegates thought the draft was acceptable to the United States and a final plenary session would be held tomorrow as originally scheduled.

During the next week, however, the deligates must again strive to whittle down the 21 billion dollar figure set as the European trade deficit for the next four years which the United States is expected to make up.

Acting Premier Accuses Greeks Of 9 Violations

Sofia, Sept. 14 (AP).—Acting Premier Traiche Kostov charged today the Bulgarian border had been "violated nine times by Greece" during the past four months. He told a news conference all the incidents were brought to the attention of the Allied Control Commission.

Kostov said a United Nations sub-commission had not fully considered Bulgaria's accusations concerning the incidents.

"The Bulgarian government does not consider it possible under prevailing circumstances to render assistance to the sub-commission in Salonika, which acts exclusively and one-sidedly in favor of the Greek government and against the interests and sovereignty of Bulgaria," Kostov added.

To Reconstruct Ports

Athens, Sept. 14 (AP).—The American aid for Greece program is mapping reconstruction and rehabilitation of Greek ports, highways, railways, bridges and the Corinth Canal.

Col. David W. Griffiths, Galveston, Tex., who directs the engineering corps for the program, said priority will be given to the ports of Salonika, Piraeus, Volos and the Corinth Canal. The plan also calls for restoration of 3000 miles of roads, with the Athens-Salonika route the first to be undertaken. Due to guerrilla action, Griffiths said, road work can be done only in areas certified as safe.

Markos Demands Hearing

London, Sept. 14 (INS).—Radio Moscow said today that Greek rebel leader "Gen." Markos Vifthiades has demanded a hearing for guerrilla representatives before the United Nations General Assembly.

Meanwhile, Athens dispatches said the Greek air force is preparing to scatter thousands of pamphlets outlining government amnesity terms over rebel-held areas.

Loan Refusal Held Forcing France to Act

By William J. Humphreys

Paris, Sept. 14.—Failure of the International Bank of Reconstruction to grant France an immediate loan of 250 million dollars provoked the conservative, well-informed newspaper Le Figaro today to forecast national bankruptcy unless the government acted with extraordinary speed in applying "painful, unpopular" financial reforms.

The London conference of the International Bank's directors and its "disinterest" in investing in French recovery under the present circumstances also stirred up in other newspapers of both the political right and left a hornet's nest of speculation about the franc's devaluation.

Unless the non-Communist coalition government is able to correct inflation, it would be natural to suppose that public opinion would divorce itself more and more from the center and split to the extreme left, the Communists, and to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, on the right.

Financial Stabilization, organized papers that did not deal in recriminations against the International Bank. It blamed the straitened French financial situation on government inaction. The only means of saving the franc, said the newspaper, was through drastic action by the Committee of Le Figaro saw no other way by Premier Paul Ramadier last Tuesday to deal with the emergency.

Le Figaro saw no other way out than to slash the national budget (and the thousands of civil service employes) to fit government revenue; establish a tightened control over nationalized industries (electricity, gas, railways and coal mines), and modify the new social security system which is based on production and profits being 120 per cent of 1938. They are now only about 85 per cent.

Produce Men Urge Buying As Prices Drop

If you want to fight the high cost of eating and improve your health at the same time, eat more fresh fruit and vegetables, says J. Walter Smith of 1105 Trenton pl. se.

No one will be surprised to learn that Smith is executive secretary of the District Wholesale Fruit and Produce Association, Inc. However, this new group of fresh fruit and vegetable brokers, commission dealers and wholesalers has marshaled some statistics on behalf of their products.

A survey by the association shows, according to Smith, that 11 fruits and vegetables are currently selling here at or less than their prices of two years ago.

The best grade of celery was $5.50 a crate on sales by carlot receivers to wholesalers here, during the first week of September, 1945, while now the price is $3.50 on the same basis.

California oranges are down from $5.95 a box to $5.43 a box, while apples have dropped from $4.50 a bushel to $2.50.

Standard Oil Of New Jersey Plans Expansion

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. (N J.) and its worldwide affiliates expect to complete by 1951 one of the greatest expansion programs in the company's history, designed to meet record consumer requirements for petroleum products.

A survey in the firm's publication, The Lamp, said petroleum demands have climbed to the highest point in history and economists estimate that by 1951 world demand will reach 3,750,000,000 barrels of crude and products annually—a 35 per cent increase over 1945

To meet that demand Jersey Standard's program includes extensive exploration and drilling, increased refinery capacity and additional pipelines.

The report said Jersey's domestic affiliates alone would spend about 121 million dollars on producing activities in 1947. Besides that they are making capital expenditures of nearly 60 million dollars for modernization and construction of refinery facilities this year, with another 75 million dollars scheduled for 1948.

Eire May Stop Buying in U. S.

Letterkenny, County Donegal, Eire, Sept. 14 (AP).—Sean Lemass, minister for industry and commerce, announced today Eire was ready to cooperate in measures to support the pound sterling, and is considering curtailment of purchases from the United States.

"At some stage these purchases may have to cease altogether," Lemass said following British-Eire monetary talks in London.

The Eire minister expressed doubt of success for the European Marshall Plan conferences now in progress in Paris, saying:

"The situation in Europe now favors the development of communism, and it is more than doubtful if a workable economy can be established in western Europe, even with the aid of the United States."

Eire is one of the 16 nations taking part in the Paris talks and also one of the 13 "Marshall Plan" countries which agreed last week to form a study group to consider formation of a customs union or unions.

Embassy Employe Killed

San Salvador, El Salvador, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Margaret Stewart, 21, of Miami, Fla., an American Embassy employe, was killed yesterday when the private plane she was piloting crashed near a landing field.

Disturbances Continue in Venezia Giulia

Trieste, Sept. 14 (AP).—Disturbances resulting in the death of an 11-year-old Italian girl and the wounding of a Slovene girl continued throughout variuos sections of Venezia Giulia today as the hour approached for the withdrawal of British and American troops from the Morgan line.

Amelia Passarini, the Italian girl, was killed last night when a burst of machine-gun bullets was fired against a Communist cultural club in the Slovene district of San Giacomo in Trieste. Wanda Ierman, a 25-year-old Slovene girl, was wounded.

In the Nonfalcone shipyards, which will be Italian under terms of the peace treaty, a Venezia Giulia police jeep was blown up. Minor disturbances occurred in Gorizia when Slovenes went on a buying spree to unload their Italian lire.

Meanwhile, two boatloads of Italian refugees have arrived in Trieste from the coastal city of Pola, which will become Yugoslav territory under the treaty. The ships carried about 1000 Italians and their household goods—the last of thousands who have deserted Pola and converted it into a ghost city.

(Last February thousands of Italian citizens left Pola, where 28,000 of the city's 33,000 population had indicated their intention to leave.)

In Trieste, Maj. Gen. T. S. Airey, British commander of the area, announced that the Allied withdrawal from the Morgan line, which will leave Italian and Yugoslav troops facing each other on a new temporary border, would take place Tuesday.

When the troop movements begin, the Trieste free state will be taken over by representatives of the Anglo-American and Yugoslav military governments. The United Nations Security Council is scheduled to control Trieste after it agrees on a governor for the territory.

The Morgan line separates the British-American zone from the Yugoslav occupation zone in Venezia Giulia, which was Italian before the war but divided between Italy and Yugoslavia under the new treaty.

Sunday Movies Hit

Winchester, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Opening of motion picture theaters here on Sundays is viewed by the Winchester Ministerial Association as "another step in the increasing trend toward the complete breakdown of the observance of the Sabbath," according to an open letter to "The Christian People of Winchester."

Good Looking—Good Going

Go right ahead, sir, and strain your coat buttons—but don't be surprised if the snapshots show only half the picture.

True enough, they'll show those long, sleek, flowing fender lines. You can expect them to portray you posed with the fashion-plate smartness that calls the turn on car styles for a long time to come.

But what camera can hope to catch a picture of the thrill that's yours when you touch off the life in this big Fireball straight-eight power plant and really start going places?

What lens can paint the wondrous, level going you get from four soft coil springs, one on each wheel, that turn every ride into a level glide?

How are you going to show the good solid feel of bigness and ample roadweight—the steady, road-wise bearing of a car long enough and husky enough to ride highway and byway alike with equal serenity?

For good going means just as much as good looks in making this America's most wanted automobile.

Power in abundance—control that's firm yet light—room for six big grownups—firmness and quiet and long, dependable life—these are part of any Buick and every Buick no less than the very newest in styling.

That's why Buick's the kind of buy that's smart regardless of delivery date. That's why it's mighty wise to nail one down now, ahead of tomorrow's buyers.

We'll take your order with or without a trade-in. We'll make delivery as soon as we possibly can. But we can't do a thing to make you sure of getting the newest thing in automobiles until you give us the word.

How about getting a firm order in right away?

China Communists Raid Yangtze Towns

D. C. 'Proclaimer'

Board Aide Is Modern Town Crier

RALPH A. NORTON

Ralph Norton, minus the buckled shoes and the clanging bell, is Washington's modern version of "Ye olde towne cryer."

When the city fathers decide to proclaim some special event to the local citizens, they beckon to graying, bespectacled Norton, 52, assistant secretary to the Board of Commissioners.

After receiving his instructions, Norton retires to his office in the District Building, and begins motioning to the Muses. They generally respond without hesitation.

Inspired, Norton transforms the Commissioners' skeleton statement into a flowery piece of prose, embellished with erudite phrases and a liberal sprinkling of "wherefores" and "whereases."

Composes 200 Proclamations

He has composed nearly 200 proclamations—announcing everything from "Religious Education Week" to "Clean-up, Paint-up Week"—since he took over the job in 1941. Only twice have the Commissioners asked him to revise a proclamation's wording.

Norton admits his inspiration doesn't always come from bona fide Muses. "Sometimes I get ideas from written material sent in by various organizations," he disclosed. "And current events written up in the newspapers give me valuable background, too."

He won his writing laurels the hard way, editing the club newspaper for the now defunct Aloysius Club, an athletic and social organization for Catholic men. "I wrote a straight comedy and two musical comedies which the club produced."

Graduate of Georgetown

A native of Washington, Norton is a graduate of Georgetown University (1916), boasts a law degree from Georgetown University Law School (1919), and passed his District bar examinations in 1920.

"I began my District career 31 years ago as secretary to the superintendent of the old street-cleaning department," Norton recalls. From 1920 to 1941, he served as assistant secretary, assigned for duty to the office of a Commissioner. He lives with his wife and his mother at 3115 Patterson pl. nw.

Government Places Curfew on River Traffic as Result

Nanking, Sept. 14 (AP).—The daring Communist raider Liu Po-Cheng, his arms vastly replenished by conquest, was reported roaming the north banks of the Yangtze, about 50 miles from this Chinese capital today, leading the government to impose a curfew on the suburbs and on river traffic.

Military sources said last week Liu broke into Liuan, a government arsenal city, 140 miles west of Nanking.

It was quickly recaptured, but not before 150,000 rifles and considerable ammunition had disappeared. Presumably Liu's men destroyed what they could not carry away. The arms had been intended to equip government recruits.

Liu has about 25,000 men. Five weeks ago, Liu was reported pinned against the flooded Yellow River in western Shantung. The one-eyed Communist tactician slipped away, swung southeast and has moved more than 500 circuitous miles in a brilliant series of hit-skip raids deep behind government lines in Shantung, Honan and Anhwei provinces.

Medical Supplies Use To Ransom Flier Denied

Tsingtao, China, Sept. 14 (AP).—Admiral Charles M. Cooke(jr., today flatly denied that medical supplies had been given to the Chinese Communists as ransom for a U. S. Marine flier who was released Thursday after two weeks in Communist hands.

The report had been received from usually reliable informants.

U. S. Shanghai Patrol Called Family Guard

Shanghai, Sept. 14 (AP).—Col. E. W. Weissman of Rochester, N. Y., military police commander of the United States Army forces in Shanghai, said today his men weer forced to patrol army billet areas "to protect the wives and daughters of servicemen, who have been constantly subjected to indecent acts, even daylight robbery, at the hands of Chinese.

Weissman's statement was in reply to a charge yesterday by the American-owned and edited China Weekly Review that "outrageous conduct" of American military policemen was arousing bitter anti-American feeling among Chinese.

Weissman said the conduct of American personnel in Shanghai had been "above average during the past year" and declared the accusation by editor and publisher John W. Powell was "absolutely ridiculous."

French Peasants Join in Tribute At U. S. Cemetery

St. Laurent sur Mer, France, Sept. 14 (AP).—Hundreds of French peasants bicycled to the United States military cemetery here today and joined military and diplomatic officials in a tribute to United States soldiers soon to embark upon their last homeward journey.

The scene was the St. Laurent Cemetery, where 3805 Americans are buried on a high bluff overlooking Omaha Beach. Many of the bodies are to be exhumed for shipment to the United States. Most of the men buried here were First Infantry Division troops who stormed ashore on D-Day, 1944, under command of Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, now American deputy commander in chief in Europe.

Both Huebner and United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery thanked the French people for their "loving kindness" in regularly decorating the graves with flowers. French Navy Minister Louis Jacquinot also attended.

The Army is closing 24 temporary cemeteries in France for disinterment purposes. Bodies are sent home only at relatives' request.

Pickets to Resume At Pulaski Plant

Pulaski, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Resumption of picketing after a weekend lull is scheduled at Coleman Furniture Corp. here tomorrow in protest against dismissal of 62 employes following a 15-minute work stoppage Thursday.

More than 200 of the plant's 450 workers honored the picket lines established Friday. Cecil Queen, president of Local 249, United Furniture Workers, CIO, said union members have been instructed to be on hand at 6:15 a. m. tomorrow to take up picketing again.

One on the Aisle—

Versailles a Movie Set
Dumas Picture At Hippodrome

By Richard L. Coe

TWO CELEBRATED PHYSICAL triumphs of France are on view in the Hippodrome's new film, "The Queen's Necklace." One is the flesh and blood Viviane Romance, the other the stone and glass Palace of Versailles.

It would be pleasant to report that Miss Romance, remembered here for her wondrously sensual Carmen, gets the best of the picture. But though her role springs from an Alexander Dumas story, it lacks sustained excitement. She is, however, fascinating to watch.

The Versailles setting comes as something of a surprise, at least to this observer. Nothing had been said in advance publicity about this story of a famous fraud in the court of Louis XIV having his own great palace as its setting. That the palace has become a movie setting strikes us as mildly fabulous.

The exterior courtyard, the massive facade of the buildings (for the palace is virtually several), the giant hallways and reception rooms, the green marble staircase, the apse of the chapel and the Grand Trianon are all there as parts of Dumas' story. It's an incredible setting, the like of which could be found nowhere else.

Yes, there is more than a touch of drabness to it, though. While it is owned by the government, it would take millions of francs to give the place the sparkle it must originally have had. Further, the poverty of French technicians, as opposed to our Hollywood skill in this respect, hardly does justice to Louis' masterpiece of magnificence. What marvels the Hollywood technicians might have done with this setting!

The story could hardly have been more aptly chosen, though it decidedly lacks the excitement it should have had. Dumas novelized the historical case of Jeanne de la Motte, one of the most piquant cheats in the annals of France.

That Ambitious Cardinal

Jeanne is the lass who daringly made herself a go-between for the ambitious Cardinal de Rohen to ingratiate himself with Marie Antoinette. By the forgery of her lover and with a "look-alike" of the queen as her accomplice, she brought off the sale of a diamond necklace to Marie and pocketed the fortune herself. That it was one of the many incidents leading the royal family to the guillotine has given the 1947 film-makers the chance to insert an apologia for revolution. It's an interesting angle though it doesn't quite come off.

As Jeanne, Miss Romance has a juicy part, which seldom comes to life because neither the scriptwriter nor the technicians are up to par. There's a gory finale, with Jeanne being whipped and branded, that gives some suggestion of the Romance Carmen, which was a masterpiece of earthy sensuality.

The rest of the cast is able, some of the performers being self-assured members of the Comedie Francaise. The costumes, too, and the chapel's organ music are both striking, though once again poor camera technique, lighting and recording don't begin to do their subjects justice.

For all the pollid qualitf of the film as a film, "The Queen's Necklace" has a real appeal for anyone interested in this monument of France. And if you've been glancing at the current Life's supplement on eighteenth century France, you'll find the picture an interesting footnote.

SUBSCRIPTIONS for the first week series of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society have closed, but memberships in the second week series still are available for the full six-play group. So reports the Guild's local office. The subscription office in the National's mezzanine lobby is open each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 12 noon until 5 p. m. throughout the season. In other words, if you want to subscribe to the Guild's full set of six plays you can do so, but you'll have to pick a performance in the second week of each run.

"FANTASIA" is doing "fantastic" business at the Little. The Disney musical has gone and broken the house records, which is something each successive film seems to manage down at the Little. Very baffling, but, vows the Little, 'tis so.

"THE COMMON GLORY," Paul Green's pageant on Virginia's role in our early history, closed last night down in Williamsburg. In 52 performances, the drama played to 75,000 persons from all over the country. Yes, "The Common Glory" will resume next summer, God willing.

ADD VISITORS: Russell Birdwell at the Statler. He's here to settle details for the opening of Charlie Chaplin's "Monsieur Verdoux," set for the Capitol a week from Thursday.

TOMORROW: We review "Lady Windermere's Fan," opening tonight with Cornelia Otis Skinner and Estelle Winwood at the National.

Grand Mufti Opposes Palestine Settlement

By Drew Pearson

As the United Nations tomorrow endeavors to solve, among other things, the long-festering question of tragic Palestine, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem has carefully coached a delegation of Arabs to come to New York to defeat the settlement.

Ever since the war's end, when the Allies captured certain Nazi documents and witnesses, the State Department has had sensational evidence of the part which the Grand Mufti played in the cold-blooded Nazi murder of five million Jews.

Deliberately and carefully, the Grand Mufti plotted to exterminate completely all Jews from Europe. No wonder they are now bitter! No wonder many of them are also critical of the State Department for not having made these records public.

The records even include a signed contract by which Hitler agreed to pay the Grand Mufti 50,000 marks a month to stir up the Arabs against the Allies.

The Mufti, now trying so diligently to defeat the United Nations settlement of Palestine, jumped on the Axis bandwagon early in the war when he fled to Iraq and started the famous Iraq revolt against England. This was at the most critical time of the war, as the British were being driven out of Greece and the Russians had their backs to the wall at Stalingrad. It was Hitler's aim to join his two armies in Iraq, where the Mufti had enlisted an Iraquian army to help him. He almost succeeded.

State Department Censorship

Since the State Department has refrained from publishing documents bearing on one of the most important and controversial subjects before the United Nations, this column herewith publishes the most pertinent of them.

Evidence that the Grand Mufti conspired to exterminate European Jewry is given in the testimony of Dieter von Wisliczeny, a deputy feuhrer who held the tile of Adviser on Jewish Affairs in Slovakia, Greece and Hungary. He states:

"In my opinion, the Grand Mufti, who has been in Berlin since 1941, played a role in the decision of the German government to exterminate the European Jews, the importance of which must not be disregarded. He has repeatedly suggested to the various authorities with whom he has been in contact, above all before Hitler, Ribbentrop and Himmler, the extermination of European Jewry. He considered this as a comfortable solution for the Palestine problem.

"In his messages broadcast from Berlin, he surpassed us in anti-Jewish attacks. He was one of Eichmann's best friends and has constantly incited him to accelerate the extermination measures. I heard say that, accompanied by Eichmann, he has visited incognito the gas chamber in Auschwitz."

(Eichmann, referred to above, was the Nazi in charge of Jewish extermination.)

Jewish Escape Blocked

During the war, American Jewish leaders, working through Catholic leaders in the Vatican, made partially successful efforts to smuggle Jews out of Germany. Field Marshal Goering was sympathetic and arranged to wink at the exit of several thousand Jews into Bulgaria and Romania, as a step toward Palestine.

This aroused the vigorous protests of the Grand Mufti. And one captured telegram dated July 25, 1944, shows that he wrote Foreign Minister Ribbentrop as follows:

"Your Excellency: I have previously called the attention of Your Excellency to the constant attempt of the Jews to emigrate from Europe in order to reach Palestine. I ask Your Excellency to take the necessary steps to prevent the Jews from emigrating."

Official records also show that on June 5, 1943, the Mufti wrote the Foreign Minister of Bulgaria protesting that 4000 Jewish children should be permitted to arrive there. He was successful. On June 28, 1943, he also blocked the transport of 1800 Jews to Romania.

Nazis Pay Mufti

The financial agreement between the German government and the Grand Mufti came in the last days of the war, when Hitler knew he was being defeated, but planned to continue the battle against the British even after the armistice. To this end, the Mufti was given parachutists, equipped with short-wave radio and plenty of cash.

The contract, dated April 5, 1945, just a month before VE-Day, and later captured by the Allies, read as follows:

"Agreement

"between the Government of the Greater German Reich and the Grand Mufti of Palestine, Hadji Amin el Husseini.

"The Government of the Greater German Reich, represented by the Foreign Office, concludes the following agreement with the Grand Mufti of Palestine, Hadji Amin el Husseini:

"1. The Government of the Greater German Reich puts at the disposal of the Grand Mufti of Palestine funds required for the fight of liberation against the common enemy. These funds are granted in the form of reichsmark.

"2. For this purpose an account is being opened for the Grand Mufti of Palestine with the Reichtreasure.

"The Grand Mufti of Palestine can draw against this account until further notice of 50,00 reichsmark per month in order to cover the immediate requirements for this movement. The money originates from Reich funds.

"This account will also be charged with the expenses of the Foreign Office and other headquarters of organizations of the Reich which are incurred for the Grand Mufti of Palestine or the movement conducted by him. It is understood that these expenses—commencing April 1, 1945—shall not exceed the amount of 12,000 reichsmark per month (in words: twelve thousand reichsmark) until further notice.

"3. The Grand Mufti of Palestine agrees to pay back the credit advanced to him. Amortization and interest payments will be subjects of further agreements.

"4. This agreement becomes effective retroactively as of the first of April, 1945.

"Signed, in duplicate original, in Berlin, the fourth day of April, 1945.

Such is the record of the man who now plots to block the United Nations settlement of Palestine.

Dodgers Win Pair, Virtually 'In' as Giants Defeat Cards; Kramer Drops First Two Sets but Beats Parker for Title

Tigers Trounce Nats Twice to Regain 2d

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The humidity at Griffith Stadium was 85 per cent yesterday but that was a very low mark, indeed, compared to the utter humility and futility of the Nats.

The only thing they showed 11,170 customers was their ability to be defeated, an achievement they had ingloriously accomplished 80 times before they demonstrated twice to the Tigers yesterday.

Defeat is hardly the word to use to describe what happened in the first game. Mayhem comes closer to painting the real picture. The Bengals got 20 hits, only 13 of which were singles, for a 16-to-6 decision.

The Tigers kept the score within respectable bounds in the nightcap, holding the margin to 8 to 4. They got 31 hits in both games off of five Nat hurlers.

Tigers Back In Second

This massacre of the Nats served more than just to fatten the Tiger batting averages. It vaulted them back into second place, dislodging the Red Sox whose game with Chicago was rained out.

The first game bombardment was quite a sight. The 20 safeties Detroit collected were good for 33 total bases. Their punishing assortment of fire included home runs by Hoot Evers and Vic Wertz, who hit for the cycle, plus two triples and three doubles. The rest were trifling singles.

Wertz almost licked the Nats single-handed. His homer, triple, double and single chased in four runs and he scored five himself, one less than the Nats scored as a team.

Walter Masterson started the first game and in case you came out to the park late or tuned in on your radio after the second inning you missed him. 'Twould be nice to say that the Tigers did, too, but they didn't. They socked him for seven runs and eight hits in his two-inning stint and did the rest of their damage against Scott Cary.

Dozier Comes In

Buzz Dozier, the young Texas fireballer, was ushered into the slaughter in the seventh and permitted only one hit and no runs for the two and two-thirds innings he toiled.

The Nats, who were able to get up nothing except a sweat for the first three innings, almost chased Freddy Hutchinson in the fourth when they scored five times to bring the score t o8-6. With two away, Johnny Sullivan and Buddy Lewis singled. Sherry Robertson followed with a grounder that took a freak hop over Freddie Mayo's head, going for a double.

It loked like curtains for Hutchinson, but he got Rick Ferrell out to halt the spree and went on to capture his 15th of the year. The Tigers scored in every inning but the third, eighth and ninth.

Milo Candini made his second start of the year in the nightcap and lasted only one inning. The Bengals got a pair of runs off him in the first and started a four-run frame against him in the second.

In Comes Ferrick

As soon as he had issued his fourth hit, he was yanked in favor of Tom Ferrick. Ferrick occupied the mound until Early Wynn batted for him in the fourth. Masterson finished up and yielded the final two Tiger runs.

The Nats got a pair off Paul Trout who chalked up his tenth, in the fourth when they bunched three singles and an error and got their final pair with a four-hit uprising in the eighth.

Stan Spence's double and three singles led the 13-hit Nat offense. The Tigers were restricted to 11 hits, but made the most of theirs.

Baltimore Colts Lose, 14-7, to 49ers

San Francisco, Sept. 14 (AP).—Scoring touchdowns in the first and third periods, the San Francisco 49ers defeated the Baltimore Colts, 14-7, today to maintain a perfect record in the All-America Conference Profesional Football League.

It made three wins for the local team. A crowd of 25,787 witnessed the contest in foggy weather.

The victory was a personal triumph for Norman "Big Chief" Standlee, plunging fullback, who crashed over for both touchdowns. He also broke his own record for the number of times carrying a football. He packed the oval 23 times. He set the league mark for a single game last season when he carried it 21 times.

San Francisco was clearly the superior team, although held to a 7-7 tie at halftime. Baltimore made its touchdown early in the second quarter on a 90-yard drive, highlighted by a pass from Wilson Schwenk to sub Left End Lamar Davis, good for 53 yards. The Colts scored when the sub left half, Doc Mobley, raced around end for the final three yards.

The '49ers scored nine minutes after the game started after intercepting a pass on Baltimore's 37. Two running plays and a pass for 11 yards from Quarterback Frank Albert to Left Half Len Eshmont put the ball on the one-yard marker. Standlee cracked the line for the score.

San Francisco scored the clinching points in the third period on a 40-yard combined running and passing attack. Baltimore had been forced to punt from its 7-yard marker. After moving the ball up to the 3-yard line on passes and plunges, Standlee packed it over straight through the line.

13,000 Cheer Frankie for 5 Minutes

By Gayle Talbot

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP). Jack Kramer won his second straight National Tennis title today, and 31-year-olds Frankie Parker, the loser, won an ovation from 13,000 fans such as has seldom been heard at Forest Hills.

Kramer's victory had been expected, but no one could have foreseen the cagey, courageous battle Parker put up against the world's greatest star before he finally went down under a hurricane of shots by scores of 4—6, 2—6, 6—1, 6—0, 6—3.

When the two-hour contest was over and they were presenting the silverware to Kramer, the crowd packed in the big stadium applauded politely. Then Frankie, the veteran who had fought through two five-set struggles in as many days, stepped forward, and it happened.

His Eyes Misting

For close to five minutes Frankie stood with his chin trembling and his eyes misting while a Forest Hills crowd gave him the ultimate tribute. Never before had Frankie heard anything like it, even when he was winning the title in 1944 and '45.

The dapper little fellow with the mechanical game and the indomitable spirit found that he was appreciated in defeat as he never had been before in the years of his triumphs.

For two sets Parker, scarcely expected to give the big Wimbledon and American champion a good workout, made Kramer look almost like a novice. By keeping the ball doggedly in play, he won two sets in les stha nan hour and was within sight of a victory that would have seemed almost incredible.

Kramer Finds Himself

That was as far as he got. The "big guy" suddenly found his game at the start of the third set and began whamming his terrific shots against the sidelines, just as he had done after dropping a set to Jaroslav Drobny, the Czech, on the previous day.

Frankie's game, like Drobny's, was incapable of coping with such tennis. He lost, but the crowd didn't forget the thrills of those first two sets.

The women's title went to Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., who put on a finish almost to equal Kramer's in defeating her fellow Californian, Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, by 8—6, 4—6, 6—1.

For two sets the two Coast friends battled so evenly that you couldn't have separated them with a sliver. It appeared to be either's crown for the asking. And then, after Miss Osborne won the opening game of the deciding set, Miss Brough cut loose with a big service and a raging sequence of ground strokes which left her opponent on the ropes.

Before she met Miss Osborne in the final, the new champion had to finish her semifinal against Mrs. Nancy Bolton of Australia, which had been halted the previous night by darkness with each having won a 6—4 set. Miss Brough took the decider today, 7—5.

Pirie Wins Trophy in Sailing Races

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Lockwood M. Pirie, 38-year-old Chicago department store executive, and his Star Class boat, Twin Star, won tne United States Steel Corp. trophy yesterday as the sailboat races of the President's Cup Regatta ended on the Potomac River off Hains Point.

Pirie, who guided his gray-hulled dinghy across the line first in the two Saturday races, slipped to second in yesterday's event, but his aggregate point total of 53 2/3 was enough to give him a 6 2/3 points margin over Ted S. Clark's Bolt.

Third place in the Star Class competition went to last year's champion, Arthur Deacon of Larchmont, N. Y., and his boat Armade, which netted 46 1/3 points.

Sun Keeps Fans in Cars

Yesterday's races were run under a hot sun that kept the several thousand spectators under the shelter of their automobiles. There was practically no wind Start of the races were delayed an hour and twenty-five minutes, as officials waited in vain for stronger breezes.

Pirie's victory was an ironic one. It was Defending Champion Deacon who last month talked the former Navy liteutenant commander into entering the regatta competition for the first time. Deacon's persuasive speechmaking cost him the trophy.

An Upset Recorded

One upset marked the races. The Chesapeake 20-footer, America, with second and four finishes in Saturday's races, came through with a victory yesterday to nose out Blue Water for the championship of that class. America was guided by Jack Judy of Alexandria.

Blue Water, which was manned by Washington's Robert Orme, seemingly had the trophy clinched after scoring two firsts Saturday. But a seventh place performance yesterday cost Orme the crown.

Outstanding showings were turned in yesterday in the Penquin, Hampton and Comet classes. By winning yesterday, Outsider, a Penquin, skippered by National Champion Runyon Colie of Mantoloking, N. J., made a clean sweep of all three races in that class.

Repeating that performance were Windward, a Hampton, owned by Norfolk's Charles Helms, SAILING IS SUCH FUN—In the upper picture Eric Nordholm, 20, of McLean, Va., takes a refreshing drink from the trophy presented to him for winning first place in the Comet Class sailing races yesterday on the Potomac. Sister Daghine, 15, gets a big kick out of things while awaiting her turn. In the bottom picture that object being held by Pretty Jo Hutchon, 16, of 1822 Ontario pl. nw., is really a trophy too, no kidding. She was the crew on the boat Chesapeake which came in third in the 20-foot class race. Pilot of the Chesapeake was Bill Hartge, of Galesville, Md.

Yanks Beat Browns, Need Only One Victory to Clinch Flag

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—The New York Yankees moved within a step of mathematically clinching the American League pennant today when they beat the St. Louis Browns, 6-4.

One more Yankee triumph or a Boston defeat will assure the New Yorkers of the flag. Tommy Henrich hit a three-run homer and Johnny Lindell clouted a four-bagger to pace the winners' attack. Johnny Berardino homered for St. Louis.

As it stands now the Yankees are assured of at least a tie. They might have done the clinching today but for a heavy downpour in Boston which forced the halting of the first game of a doubleheader between the Red Sox and Chicago White Sox and washed out the second game. The teams were tied at the end of seven innings when the rains came.

Once again it was Joe Page who came to the rescue as Vic Raschi became the eleventh straight starting pitcher for the Yanks to fail to go the route. Page, making his 53rd mound appearance, stopped the Browns in the last 3 2/3 innings to give Raschi his seventh triumph.

Brooks Beat Reds, Now Lead by Seven

Hatten Gets Credit For 13-2, 6-3 Wins

Cincinnati, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Dodgers virtually clinched the National League pennant today, whipping the Reds twice, 13-2 and 6-3, while the Cardinals were being trounced by the Giants.

The double win increased the Brooklyn margin over the second-place Cardinals to seven full games.

An overflow crowd of 34,622 saw Lefty Joe Hatten gain both victories for his fifteenth and sixteenth triumphs of the season.

Hatten Wins Both

The Brooklyn hurler, after scattering seven Redleg hits in the opener, came to the mound in the nightcap fourth, snuffed out a Cincinnati rally and limited the the way.

The Reds, buried under a 16-hit Dodger attack in the first game, came to life in the second and led 3-0 for three rounds.

The Brooks, then let go on Starter Ken Raffensberger in the next frame, driving him from the mound and deadlocking the game. Harry Gumbert took over and held the Dodgers until the seventh when, with Pee Wee Reese on second by virtu of a walk, a forceout and Jackie Robinson's single, Pinch Hitter Arky Vaughan singled in what proved to be the winning run.

Reese Smashes Homer

The Dodgers got another in the eighth on Don Lund's second double of the game and Hatten's single before Reese clouted a homer in the ninth.

The league-leaders pounded Redleg Hurlers Kent Peterson and Bud Lively for nine runs in the first two innings of the opener and then coasted to victory. Johnny Hetki, the Reds third hurler, kept them in check until the ninth when five hits and a walk were good for four Brooklyn runs.

Reese with two doubles in three trips to the plate drove in four runs in the first game, and Hatten helped his own cause, batting in three for the day.

Redbirds Yield To Ottmen, 9-1

St. Louis, Sept. 14 (AP).—The New York Giants pounced on a tired St. Louis Cardinal pitching staff for 13 hits to hand the St. Louis Cardinals a 9-1 loss today.

Walker Cooper and Bob Thomson hit home runs each and Cooper, Johnny Mize and Willard Marshall each socked a three-bagger in the attack.

Larry Jansen hurled the victory for New York, holding the Birds to five hits, one of them a double by Rookie Nippy Jones in the fourth which led to a run when Stan Musial singled him home.

The Giants took their first three runs in the third when Starter Jim Hearn gave up two walks and Thomson singled one man across with the first tally. Mize clouted the ball for his three-sacker for two more.

'Pappy' Was Always Kid At Heart

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

FOR ALL his 29 years, Jockey George Witmer really never grew up. Nor will he, for his life was snuffed out by injuries suffered in a racing accident at Timonium last week.

True, the little fellow with the wavy blond hair and the prematurely wrinkled brow was stamped "Pappy" long before he acquired a wife and family. However, George always was a kid, and for more than a decade was the pet of racetrackers—fans, horsemen, officials and fellow jockeys.

Witmer, who never reached 5 feet in height and just shaded 100 pounds on his heaviest day, had all the spunk necessary to ride daringly on big horses. He had an easy-going way about him that kept him on friendly terms with most humans, but, if sufficiently aroused, he would clinch his tiny fists, take a John L. Sullivan stance, and invite all comers, regardless of size, to step up.

Seldom has a more likable character appeared on the tracks. He did some things that were not exactly "kosher," but in such a straightforward and without-sneak way that his actions generally were laughed off.

Pappy never was any great shucks as a rider. The little Pennsylvania Dutchman had some success as an apprentice on the big time, but it wasn't long before he began to frequent the smaller ovals, where he became as much a part of the track as the sixteenth pole.

* * * *

HE HAD HIS INNINGS. George occasionally was leading rider at a meeting, but finally became a specialty rider—getting "alive" horses through his ability to perform at light weight.

The jockey's room and the track were not the only spots that Wilmer frequented. He liked the secretary's office and was on hand for scratch time and entry time with regularity. When not riding in the afternoon, he mascoted the pressbox.

His dry humor and knowledge of racing brought me mighty close to Pappy. It was one of his proud days when he brought Pearl up to the Charles Town pressbox and threw out his tiny chest and announced, "We are going to get married tonight."

Pappy tried many times to help me with my betting and, perhaps, down through the years, I have shown a slight profit through him.

He figured in two of my big betting moments. At Marlboro one season, I was doing the public address work from an office that originally was Stall No. 10 in the paddock. I could look through my window into Stall No. 1 where Witmer was waiting to mount a horse.

"How about your mount, Pappy?" I asked.

"I'm a living cinch," he replied.

Despite the fact I had bet $20 on the favorite and Witmer's horse was 50-1 on the board, I sent over for a $2 ticket. To my amazement, Pappy's horse won at a $124 mutuel.

* * * *

AT ANOTHER TRACK, I looked up when the horses were going to the post and saw Witmer apparently trying to attract my attention. The odds showed 30-1, but knowing the boy's long shot ability I called a messenger, marked George's horse on a program, told him to play $2 across the board and gave him a $10 bill.

I was broadcasting the race and George's horse was eight lengths on top turning in the stretch when the messenger returned and whispered in my ear, "I got the wrong ticket."

Witmer's horse won at boxcar figures. The ticket I finally got was on the favorite, who ran third and paid $2.40 to show. Not only was I raving about that, but the boy lost my $4 change.

A few years ago, I was invited to the Witmer apartment for breakfast. The old Haight appetite took me there on time, but with the hot cakes being stacked and the green links sizzling, Pappy had not returned from the morning workouts.

As we sat down to the food, Pappy came in and it seems he had met a man with a bottle. At any rate, he was in a jovial mood, entirely out of line with a young man who had four horses to ride that afternoon.

But Wifey Pearl was equal to the occasion. While I was putting away the vituals she was putting Witmer into shipshape. It wasn't long before she appeared carrying his towel wrapped form and there was a scream as she apparently ducked him in the cold tub.

After he had a nap, she dressed him as a little girl would a doll in his Palm Beach suit, white shoes, blue shirt and striped tie. With his hair slicked down, George was diked out like a young man of distinction.

Pearl followed us to the door, grabbed Pappy and looked him over with approval. Then she turned him around, booted him through the doorway with the remark, "Now get out on that track and ride me a winner."

Well, Jockey George (Pappy) Witmer rode three winners that afternoon—but I didn't bet on them because I thought I knew something.

Chapman Grand Slams In Opener

Philadelphia, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics battled the Cleveland Indians to a 4 to 4 stalemate in the second game of a doubleheader halted at the end of nine innings by the Uennsylvania Sunday curfew law today after winning the first game 11 to 9 with a nine run rally in the eighth inning to cut the Tribe's fourth place margin to two and a half games.

A grand slam home run by Sam Chapman featured the first game's uprising which saw the Mackmen combine six walks and four hits for their winning runs.

Coolidge's Hopes Rise; Devitt Relies on Speed

Askin Concerned About Reserves

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

DEVITT PREP, which always tackles a murderous schedule with a small squad, is trying something new this season.

Last year's team, which had plenty of weight and size, lost six games, while winning only three. This year's outfit has no big fellows, but it plans to have a far more successful season by concentrating on speed, drive and hustle.

Coach Len Askin will field one of the finest backfields in this area, but he is worried about the thinness of his line reserves. Certainly his first team will be strong, but when you meet the teams that Devitt does, reserves are an important factor.

Askin is using a double-wing system with a man in motion and is trying a few plays from the short punt formation. With his backfield speed he feels that the double wing is the thing to try and he has saved the single wing he used last season.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to holdover backs Jack Doffert and Dave Hills, Devitt has Gene Taylor, Jack Baumgartner, Paul Pometto, Ray McKay, Lou Trombo, Jack Kenealey and Francis Bates to carry the ball.

Taylor and Baumgartner are two of the better kickers in town, having demonstrated their ability at Wilson and Tech respectively. Pometto, a place-kicking expert and Kenealey are also Tech alumni. Trombo was a one-man gang at Falls Church High last year.

The end squad is made up of Paul Daniel, Mike Mahaney, George Taylor, Jim and Phil DeLozier. At tackles, Bob Hanrahan, Bob Stevens and Bud Tullock are fighting for first string berths, with Dave Byron and Don Garson in reserve.

* * * *

THE SMALL but rugged guard group includes Dean Mulligan, Bill Poms, Lou Brooks, Bob Danta and Frank Barclay. Mulligan played high school ball at Wilson and Poms gained experience at Tech.

Billy Fletcher will be Devitt's first string center this season, having been converted from end. Backing him up at the pivot spot are Ralph Wilkens and John Sullivan.

Askin refuses to go overboard on this year's team, but he is more confident than he was at this time a year ago. As he put it:

"We have a lot more zip this season and, although we lack size, I'll string along with a bunch of hustlers. I haven't any use for big fellows with no drive. Give me kids like these boys of mine who will give any team a battle all the way."

Conn Sees Breaks Turn in His Favor

AFTER TWO WEEKS of bad breaks, prospects at the football camp of the defending interhigh champion Coolidge Colts are brighter.

Coach Gil Conn reported to the Colts' first practice, confident five regulars from last year's team would be on hand to form the nucleus of another contender.

Then the roof caved in on him and here's what happened:

First, Chuck Ackerman, his 210 pounds All-High tackle informed Conn that he (Ackerman) had lost 30 pounds during the summer, and wouldn't be available for action.

Second, Bobby Rohr, triple-threat All-High halfback, informed Conn that he would not be a candidate because he was "tired." Rohr, a letterman in football, baseball and basketball for three years, had also played summer baseball, and felt he needed a rest.

* * * *

THIRD, Krys Valanos, his regular center last year, reported with his ankle in a cast. He had broken the ankle during the baseball season.

Fourth, Houston (Tex) Jones, star halfback last season, had transferred to Woodward Prep during the summer.

The loss of four of his five regulars combined to give Conn one big headache.

But since then things began to change for the better.

First, Jess Houston, stellar halfback at Roosevelt last season, and a transfer to Coolidge during the winter, started to show fine form with his passing and punting.

Second, Ralph Schaeffer, regular guard last season, was blossoming at a new position, halfback.

Third, Benny DuVall, a promising back in 1945, who transferred to Woodward last season, had returned, and was looking fine.

The trend for the better has continued. Last Friday, a streamlined Ackerman changed his mind about playing, and reported. He looked just as strong as ever in the scrimmage that day.

* * * *

THE CAST has been removed from Valanos' ankle, and the word is that he'll be ready for action at 210 pounds within 10 days. And members of the team have reported that Rohr, after taking things easy at home, may be wavering on his decision not to play.

Conn has not heard from Jones, who is still on the Coolidge rolls. So he is hoping the blond speedboy also may change his mind and come back to Coolidge.

Buffalo Bills Win, 28-20, Over Chicago

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP).—The Bucalo Bills scored their second All-America Conference victory in three starts today, downing the Chicago Rockets, 28-20, before 33,648 spectators, a local pro footbal lrecord turnout.

The Rockets finished strong with a pair of touchdowns in the last three minutes, but it was too little and too late to overcome the Bills' fourth period lead of 28-6.

Alton Baldwin set up the first Buffalo score in the second quarter, racing 71 yards to the Rocket 2 after intercepting a pass thrown by Angelo Bertelli. Vic Kulbitski smashed across, and Steve Juzwik added the first of his four conversions.

Rocco Pirro recovered Sam Vacanti's fumble on the Chicago 35 in the third. George Ratterman hit Lafayette King with a first-down pass, and the same combination picked up the final five yards.

The Rockets came back with a 23-yard forward-lateral, Vacanti to Ted Scalissi to Bill Schroeder, for their first touchdown. A poor pass from center gave John Rokisky no chance to kick the extra point.

Ratterman's passing and Kulbitski's running brought the Bills to the Rocket 26 as the fourth period opened, and a roughness penalty halved the distance. Chet Mutryn went the last 13 yards behind King's great block. The local forces took to the air again for their final score, Dippy Evans grabbing George Terlep's throw for 31 yards.

Vacanti passed Chicago to its two final touchdowns, Ray Ramsey going 41 yards for the first, and Max Morris taking another for six yards, 11 seconds before the gun. Rokisky added each point.

Demaret Blows Up, Mangrum's 268 Takes Open

Jim Skids To 76 After 66, 65 and 64

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 14 (AP).—Jimmy Demaret blew up after three record rounds and seasoned Lloyd Mangrum rolled home with a fourth par-busting card to capture $2000 first money today in the Albuquerque Open golf tournament.

Mangrum, Tam O'Shanter pro from Chicago, finished with a 67 which with earlier cards of 69, 66 and 66 put him three blows to the good at 268.

Jim Wins $1400

He finished with a four-over-par 76 which with previous rounds of 66, 65 and 64—successive day records for the 6813-yard University of New Mexico course—gave the one-time Texan a total of 271, good for $1400 second prize.

Deadlocked five strokes back of Demaret for third and $900 each were Jim Ferrier, the big Australian from San Francisco 138-69-69—276; and George Shoux, San Bruno, Calif., 136-70-70—276.

Altogether 21 of the 38 professionals and seven amateurs in today's final round bettered par 35—37—72 for four tours of the rolling course. Highest of these was Lloyd Watkins, Odessa, Tex., whose 287 left him just one storke away from a money split.

Packers Down Boston, 14-10

Milwaukee, Sept. 14 (AP).—Scoring once through the air and once on the ground. The Green Bay Packers staved off a last quarter rally by the Boston Yanks to whip the Easterners, 14-10, in a National Football League exhibition game at the State Park here today before 17,695 fans.

Indian Jack Jacobs of the Packers outpitched Boston's Paul Governali as both teams exhibited ground attacks which functioned only in spurts.

Jacobs connected with Clyde Goodnight on a 20-yard pass in the opening quarter, and the veteran Packer end scored from 15 yards out.

Boston bounced back early in the second period, but couldn't penetrate the Packer line so Nick Scollard kicked a 37-yard field goal.

A pair of goal line fumbles cost the Packers almost certain touchdowns in the third quarter, but both teams opened up in the final period. Green Bay scored first after Bruce Smith set up the play with a brilliant 27-yard scamper around end to Boston's 29. Ted Fritsch took over and in three tries had the ball on the four, from where Tony Canadeo counted around end.

The Yanks, with Frank Seno and John Poto doing the heavy ground work and without using a pass, Marched back and in 12 plays covered 84 yards, Seno scoring from the two.

Phils hurler Dutch Leonard was third in the balloting with 647, followed by Second Baseman Emil Verban of the Phils and Ferris Fain A's first sacker.

Father Held After 3 Children Are Found Beaten to Death

Omak, Wash., Sept. 14 (INS).—Three sleeping children were shot and clubbed to death and their frenzied father was captured by police in an Omak farmhouse today.

A fourth child, who pleaded "please don't shoot me in the head" was wounded in both legs, and then beaten so violently with the rifle barrel that it was bent.

Six-year-old Billy Cary, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cary, was killed instantly by bullets in the head.

His brother, John, 9, and sister, Bobbie-Jo, 4½, also were shot in the head, then clubbed to death with the rifle.

The one surviving child was identified as Isola Ward, 4½, a playmate, who was spending the night in the Cary home.

Omak Police Chief Tom Johnson said the father, William Cary, 31, was captured in the room after a "terrific struggle."

According to Johnson's report, Cary's wife stood among the bodies of her children and tried to reason with her husband.

Police counted 43 spent shells in the farmhouse.

The Ward child reportedly told her mother:

"I saw Mr. Cary standing over me, and I said 'Please don't shoot me in the head.'

"Mr. Cary said 'All right, I'll shoot you in the leg then.'"

Meloy Defends Loyalty Check Over Radio

By the United Press

Chairman Lawrence V. Meloy of the Civil Service Commission loyalty board said yesterday that President Truman's loyalty check on Federal employes was being subjected to unjustified propaganda which had created unwarranted fear on the part of some workers.

In a radio debate with Daniel H. Schwartz of the United Public Workers (CIO), Meloy assured Federal employes that their rights would be fully protected during the Administration's drive to rid the Government payrolls of subversive groups.

"Every individual is presumed loyal until there is substantial evidence of disloyalty," he said.

But Schwartz charged that Mr. Truman's purge order "is the greatest threat to constitutional government that the people of this country have faced since the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798."

"To carry out this witch-hunt an army of thousands of police spies and a vast array of secret files have been provided for," he said. "Friends, relatives and neighbors are asked to act as stool-pigeons, often under the fear they will lose their jobs if they refuse to speak."

Shift of Immigration Unit to D. C. Delayed

300 in Philadelphia, Many With Housing Arranged, Told of Three-Month Change

By Jerry Kluttz

DELAY: The 300 employes of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Philadelphia have been told they won't be moved back here before March 1. They had been given December 1 as the moving date.

Kluttz

A good many of its employes had gone to considerable expense and trouble to arrange housing here late this year. Many had given lease notices on their apartments and homes in Philadelphia.

True or not, there are those IN employes who suspect Pennsylvania politicians had a lot to do with delaying their move. However, Public Buildings says it's merely a matter of no office space here and that the delay will be to the interest of the agency and its employes.

LOYALTY STORY: The Treasury Department the other day received a letter from a young lady in Georgia who wrote:

"I understand the Government is to give loyalty checks to its employes. I think we deserve them. I worked for the War Department three years during the war and I had an excellent efficiency rating during that period. Please don't overlook me when the Government starts to hand out those checks." There are checks, and there are checks, young lady.

CAREER: That tough Civil Service program to find jobs for 1900 jobless career employes will get under way officially a week from today. At 10 a. m. next Monday, the commission now plans to call together all agency personnel officials to explain the system to be followed. And at 2 p. m. the agency officials will be given detailed information on the jobless people from which to make selections and placements.

The first big group to be considered will be about 600 CAF-5 to CAF-14 economists, accountants, editors and statisticians. If all of these are placed, the jobs of all other service people here in certain grade levels will be wiped out. Each agency will be given a quota in place, depending on the number of war service people it has in these jobs.

The next group will be administrative people such as administrative assistants, budget and personnel officers and public relations workers. Several hundred are in this group.

Meanwhile, the Civil Service Commission has ordered the comptroller general to stop the salaries of seven war service people in the office of the Housing Expediter. It ordered these people laid off and their jobs given to career employes who got earlier by the agency. OHE protested and tried vainly to appeal to the White House. The commission then moved in and ordered the salaries stopped, which means the seven war service people must be fired within a few days. However, the commission did uphold the appeal of OHE in three cases.

LOYALTY—AFL's American Federation of Government Employes tore into CIO's left-wing United Public Workers over the loyalty issue. The AFGE heartily indorsed the loyalty program, and specifically, that question on the loyalty form which requires a Federal worker to list his union affiliation.

In an editorial in The Government Standard, official AFGE publication, President James Burns wrote in part:

"It is hard to understand why anyone would offer an objection to this type of question. Any program dedicated to eradicate disloyalty should receive the full cooperation of every employe. No one should fear such a program unless he is affiliated to and in sympathy with an organization which reflects very clearly the insidious, treacherous, and deceitful propaganda of a foreign power pledged to sow disunity in our midst, thereby attempting to undermine our Government.

"Perhaps it is natural that the UPWA objects to answering the question. Any organization which has established procedure under which its members could strike against the Government; whose ideas formulated in convention, have paralleled the propaganda issued by a foreign nation whose stock in trade is false philosophies and vapid idealogies, may have good reason to urge its members to hide their organizational affiliation.

"Government employes who are members of organizations or groups that carry out the dictates of foreign purveyors of disunity have every reason to worry. They fear the truth. It will be impossible for them to continue the pretext of being loyal Government employes.

"We in the AFGE assert that loyalty is a condition precedent not only to citizenship but also to employment in the Government service. We welcome the loyalty program.

"It can only be assumed that objections to the question must stem from a hidden truth that the spotlight of truth will ferret out those in the Government service who have chosen to affiliate themselves with organizations that today are working against the best interests of our country.

"AFGE members have nothing to hide and therefore offer no objection to our Government's desire to weed out disloyal employes. The AFGE is confident that the loyalty program will be carried out by the Civil Service Commission and the FBI in a truly American fashion. Certainly there is no reason for hysteria or the notion that this is a witchhunt. We have faith in the Government agencies whose duty it is to enforce the loyalty program.

"So, I say to all of our members, 'Do not hesitate to state your affiliation with this federation. You have reason to be proud that you are members of the AFGE.'"

IN SERIOUS CONDITION—Mrs. Polya Habicht, 43, of 3220 Chestnut st. nw., lies unconscious in the street in front of the Kennedy-Warren apartments on Connecticut ave. nw., after she was struck by a car early yesterday. Youth Charged With Leaving After Accident

Mrs. Polya Habicht Seriously Injured When Hit by Car

Police charged Ronald Keith Murray, 19, of 1501 Highland dr., Silver Spring, with leaving after colliding following an accident which early yesterday seriously injured a 43-year-old District woman.

Murray, who also faced a charge of reckless driving, was released on $1000 bond for appearance in court tomorrow.

Two motorists behind Murray's car were quoted by police as saying they saw Murray's car strike the woman, Mrs. Polya Habicht, of 3220 Chestnut st. nw., as she attempted to cross Connecticut ave. near Devonshire st. nw. shortly after midnight.

Police said Richard Gordon, 25, of 3780 First st. se., and James Feather, 25, 1401 Girard st. nw., who were driving behind Murray, saw him leave the scene after the accident.

Feather and Gordon said they followed Murray until he was stopped by traffic near the Zoo entrance, and Feather jumped out and took Murray back to the injured woman, police reported.

Mrs. Habicht was reported in a "very serious" condition at Emergency Hospital, with a fractured left leg and possible internal injuries.

In another District traffic accident, police said Harold A. Gardner, 24, of 4000 N. Fifth st., Arlington, Va., was slightly injured when the automobile he was driving went over the curb and broke a light police on MacArthur blvd. at Loughboro rd. nw. about 2 p. m.

He was treated at Georgetown Hospital for face lacerations and released.

Examinations Help in Keeping Children Fit for School Work

(Health Officer)

The program for school medical inspection in the District calls for at least three complete physical examinations during the years of the child at school; first at school entrance, then at the fourth year and again at the high school leaving age.

These are supplemented by partial examinations to determine the cause of specific complaints for which the child is referred to the doctor by teacher or nurse. Finally, there are the day-by-day observations by the class teacher who, when trained to look at the child daily for manifestations of oncoming illness or evidence of chronic disturbances in health, can make a useful contribution to the conservation of the health of the child.

As noted in an earlier article, dental defects were found in a predominantly large number of children. In order of their frequency, other defects found were enlarged tonsils, nutritional defects, skin and parasitic disorders, and defective vision. These defects constitute 69.3 per cent of the detectable defects noted by our staff of some 30 part-time physicians who, under the direction of Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, Director of the Bureau of School Medical Inspection, supervise the health of the public and parochial school children.

The dental defects were discussed at some length in one of these articles. Today, the emphasis is to be placed on the other defects, and again it must be reiterated that the cooperation of the parents and the family physician is absolutely esential.

Enlarged and defective tonsils were found in 15.5 per cent of the school children in the 1945-1946 school year by the department's physicians. This is reliably close to the percentage (14.7) of enlarged tonsils found during the previous school year, but an astoundingly large increase over the 1943-1944 school year. For in the '43-'44 report only 3.4 per cent of the number examined were found to have enlarged tonsils. The Health Department and the Board of Education can only report to parents and family physicians that such a defect is detected, and recommend that corrective measures be taken. It is then the responsibility of the parents to arrange for correction. The tonsils are particularly vulnerable to attack by disease-producing bacteria. Colds, sore throats, and other respiratory diseases occur frequently in persons with diseases tonsils and are the cause of much absence from school. Thus, defective tonsils may hamper your child for the important work of children—going to school.

Another defeat noted by the examining physicians, and one and one that is most directly attributable to the conditions at home is that of ma nutrition. In the school year 1943-1944, nutritional defects were noted in 23.6 per cent of the children examined during the course of their routine physical examinations. In that year nutritional defects were second in the list in the order of prevalence of defects. In the 1944-1945 school year, the percentage of this type of defect dropped to 7.9, and was fourth on the list. The last report noted 9.8 per cent of defects as nutritional, which placed these defects third in the order of prevalence. The essentials of nutrition are proper food selection for vitamins, proper amounts of food for caloric content, and proper habits of eating—regularity, thorough mastication or chewing, and eating slowly. No matter how efficient a health program may be, the control of nutritional habits rests essentially with the parents and the family physician. If your child is below par, is not maintaining his or her weight, your family physician should be consulted immediately.

Defective vision has been among the first five defects during the past three school years. Three years ago it was third with a percentage of 10.5; two years ago it was second with 16.6 per cent, and last year it was fifth, with 5.6 per cent. More cooperative efforts must be continued to reduce the percentage of vision defects, since so much of the educational progress is dependent upon good vision. We cannot emphasize too strongly that in the final apalysis the parents are the responsible parties in the task of seeing to it that defects of vision are corrected.

Heart defects, though eleventh on the list for several years, and fourteenth on the list in the last report, usually develop as a result of infection or some other condition which causes actual damage to the heart. The term heart disease is one covering several different diseases of the heart which interfere with its proper functioning.

The most common causes of heart damage are the infectious diseases, such as pneumonia, influenza, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diptheria, and more especially acute rheumatic fever. The greatest damage of rheumatic fever lies in the serious damage it does to the heart. An attack of this fever may follow a sore throat, tonsillitis, or a cold. The best protection for children who have been attacked by rheumatic fever is periodic medical supervision with emphasis on rest, good nutrition, protection from respiratory infections, and good personal hygiene.

Other defects, while not as prevalent numerically, exist and should be corrected by the cooperative efforts of the parents, family physicians, and school personnel. These include nose and throat defects, glandular disturbances, posture and orthopedic defects, nervousness, discharging ear, and hernia.

In the next article, Dr. Ruhland will depart somewhat from the general topic "Is Your Child Fit for School?" and discuss the parental attitude toward school. The child senses the attitude of parents—and if that attitude toward school is favorable, the problems which face children in school will be met more easily.

Further information relating to nutrition may be obtained from the Nutrition Specialist, Miss Lois Burman, Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare, D. C. Health Department, NAtional 6000, Extension 2193.

mother is sponsored by the home economics departments of the public schools to better family living.

Courses scheduled in the night school this semester carry these titles: Nutrition and food preparation, meal planning and service, clothing construction and design, millinery, tailoring and renovation, slip covers, draperies and accesories ,and personality of the home.

Although planned to encourage women with families to keep up-to-date in homemaking skills, the classes are not limited to housewives.

Many of the students over the has been in operation have been past nine years that the program prospective brides or bachelor girls doing over their apartment or wardrobe.

After October 1 the same courses offered at night will be available during the day. A mother will be able to drop junior off at kindergarten while she proceeds to school.

In addition to the homemaking courses, programs in child care and development will be on the day school schedule. These courses offered last year present trained leaders who counsel mothers on how to deal with the personality or emotional problems of their children.

An unusual phase of the homemakers' school is that the students set up the curriculum.

If there is sufficient demand for a course—15 to 20 interested persons—the public schools will find a qualified teacher and then class begins.

Like all public instruction, classes are free. Students are required, though, to pay a laboratory fee of one dollar for clothing, interior decoratin gand millinery classes and five dollars for food terials used in demonstrations.

Registration for night classes at Central, McKinley and Roosevelt High Schools will be between 6:30 and 9 p. m. September 22 at each school.

Complete information about day classes for white students will be released after school officials know how many students to expect. Mrs. Ola Day Rush, home economics department, Central High School, 13th and Clifton sts. nw., is in charge of arrangements.

Night classes for Negro students will be held at Armstrong Senior High School, O st. between 1st and 3d sts. nw., and day classes at Ambush Elementary School, L st. between 6th and 7th sts. sw., and Bowen Elementary School, 3d and K sts. nw.

There will also be day and night classes for Negro students at three housing developments, Parkside, Kenilworth ave. and Juste st ne., Syphax, 100 S st. nw., and Lincoln, 149 50th st. ne., as well as at three community centers, Northwest Settlement House, 515 M st. nw., Southeast Settlement House 243 Virginia ave. se., and Mount Zion Community House, 20th and N sts. nw.

Full-Time City School Doctors Are Suggested

Gannon Asserts Step May Be Necessary to Meet Needs of Pupils

Dr. James A. Gannon, physician member of the Board of Education, said yesterday there ought to be one doctor to every 2000 pupils in Washington schools.

"We have approximately 100,000 school children in Washington, so we would need 50 doctors and 100 nurses to make ideal health services," he declared.

Currently, he said, "the Health Department assigns only 15 part-time nurses, and the proportion of doctors is almost as bad." The supply, he said, "is not nearly enough to give Washington school children any sort of adequate medical attention."

It may be, Dr. Gannon declared in an interview with Lou Brott over WOL's "Your Health" program, "that part-time doctors and nurses are not the answer to adequate medical attention in the schools.

"If this is so, perhaps the appointment of full-time doctors and nurses whose jobs would be the care of school children only is the ultimate answer to the entire problem."

Dr. Gannon, two weeks ago, called the schools' health program here "disgracefully inadequate."

Commenting then on a report by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, the physician board member said he would urge the school board to ask Congress to transfer school health services from the Department of Health to the board until such services improve.

Jews Gather In Temples To Welcome New Year

Rosh Hashonoh Services Usher In 10-Day Period Of Repentance

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

"L'Shono Tovo Tikvosavu"
(Happy New Year)

The need of mankind's spiritual regeneration was voiced in synagogues and temples last night, as the devout gathered for Rosh Hashonah rites ushering in the Jewish new year 5708.

Rosh Hashonah begins the annual 10 days of repentance, culminating with the observance of the fast of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, September 23 at sundown.

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, spiritual leader of Adas Israel Congregation, 6th and I sts. nw., preaching about the universal appeal of Rosh Hashonah, said:

"The call of the Shofar (ram's horn) to our bewildered generation is particularly timely in our day when, to quote the late Dr. Cyrus Adler, 'we must ga back many decades or even centuries, to find the time when the future was less certain, passion so high and counsel so confused.'"

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation, called for a reaffirmation of "the faith that made America free."

Addressing his congregation's services in Constitution Hall, Dr. Gerstenfeld declared:

"It is the faith in the words of Washington that gives to bigotry no sanction and to persecution no assistance. It is that faith that has made America strong. It is that faith that has made America a miracle of fulfillment of so much for which the just of the ages have prayed.

"It is that faith that is the real issue today in the totalitarian trend of old-world tyranny still cursed with the shadow of ancient Pharaohs and still giving to Caeser that which belongs to God."

Plight of Jews Stressed

The plight of the Jewish homeless abroad was stressed by many rabbis, among them Rabbi Herry Silverstone, spiritual leader of Tifereth Israel Congregation, 14th and Euclid sts. nw. Said he:

"Who can question the claim that Palestine, in the light of longtime planning, presents the most realistic opportunity for resettlement of large numbers of the unfortunate and victimized of our peoples?

"Who can be so indifferent to suffering, misery, devastation, as to be unaware of the complete homelessnes sof virtually millions of wandering, uprooted, terror-stricken helpless Jews; and who would deny them the physical and spiritual sustenance which we in America, through the graciousness of Divine Providence, have the ability to furnish?"

Meanwhile, all Washington Jewish congregations devoted portions of their High Holyday services to European Jewry's emergency needs, through the United Jewish Appeal's local two million dollar campaign.

Through the cooperation of the National Jewish Welfare Board, High Holyday services are being held for Jewish servicemen and women in hospitals, veterans' facilities and camps in this area.

General Sends Felicitations

General Luther D. Miller, Army chief of chaplains, sent High Holyday felicitations to men of the Jewish faith in the United States Army and Air Forces.

"God, the Father of all mankind, has guided the perspective and advancement of American life through the inspirations of our religious faiths," General Miller wrote. "May He bless all of us through the benevolences of character and deeds which our religious faiths engender."

Cantor Solomon Katz, formerly chief cantor of Kishineff, Roumania, and who narrowly escaped execution at Nazi hands, officiated at Rosh Hashonah rites at Beth Sholom—Talmud Torah Congregation, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw. He is new cantor there. Rabbi Harry Kaufman of New York City, preached.

The Rosh Hashonah observance will continue today and tomorrow in orthodox and conservative congregations, and today in reformed temples. The Washington Hebrew Congregation's service will continue today at 10:30 a. m. at Constitution Hall. Most of the other services will extend from 8 a. m. until 10:30 a. m. today and tomorrow.

$575 in Loot Taken From Parked Car

Clothing and other items valued at $575 were taken from an automobile parked in the 1200 block of H st. nw. between 12:30 and 2:30 a. m. yesterday.

The car break-in was one of several weekend thefts reported yesterday to police.

Ernest Franklin, 441 Franklin st. nw., reported $352 in cash taken from his pocketbook by an intruder who entered his home sometime Saturday night.

Miss Germain Martin, 3500 14th st. nw., also reported her home entered. Three watches and a pair of binoculars, valued at a $250 total, were missing from the bedroom, she said.

Albey Garnand, 66, of Smithburg, Md., told police he was missing $200, but he wasn't sure whether he lost it while walking near his parked truck or while he took a nap Saturday afternoon in the truck. He said he parked the truck in the 1900 block of 17th st. nw. He believed, he said, his pocket may have been picked while he was asleep.

Local Welfare Agencies Granted Funds by Virginia

Richmond, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Increased State funds made available by Governor Tuck at the request of the Mitchell Commission will enable local public welfare departments throughout the State to receive allocations conforming to their original budget requests, the State Department of Public Welfare announced yesterday.

In letters to 124 local departments of public welfare, the State agency said that additional funds will be available for the second and third quarters of the present fiscal year. The second quarter begins on October 1 and the third on January 1, 1948.

Extension of the increased authorizations to include the fourth quarter, the letters said, "will be dependent upon an emergency appropriation by the General Assembly in 1948 as contemplated by the Mitchell Commission."

Should the assembly fail to make such an appropriation, Commissioner Arthur W. James wrote the local officials, fourth quarter allocations will remain as originally approved in the local budgets.

Falls Send Three Women To Hospitals Over Weekend

Three women were hospitalized for injuries received in falls during the weekend.

Mrs. Helen Shafer, 48, 4491 MacArthur blvd. nw., was found unconscious at the foot of the stairs in her apartment building at 1:15 a. m. yesterday. Mrs. Shafer, who had been visiting friends at 4471 MacArthur blvd. nw., until 10 minutes earlier, was admitted to Emergency Hospital for possible skull fracture. Her condition was "undetermined."

Mrs. Sarah Blum, 76, of 711 G st. nw., fell while stepping from the curb into the street in the 500 block of H st. nw., about 8:30 p. m. Saturday. She was treated at Casualty Hospital for forehead cuts.

Frances Mallett, 60, of Arlington Farms, fell down a flight of steps at the Ambassador Theater, 18th and Columbia rd. nw., about 3:30 p. m. Saturday, suffering a fractured right shoulder. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Elkins, W. Va., Man Who Died In 5-Story Plunge Held Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of William E. Ewrick, 21, Elkins, W. Va., who plunged from a fifth floor apartment at 1610 Park rd. nw. about 11 p. m. Saturday.

Ewick, who had been employed for a short time by the P. J. Nee Co., was visiting Miss Eleanor V. Taylor with Patrick J. Smyth, also of Elkins, police said.

Police said Ewick had been suffering a "nervous condition" for some time and had telephoned Miss Taylor, who also is from Elkins, asking if he might talk to her about his ailment.

Shortly before 11 o'clock police said, the three decided to go out for dinner. Ewick stepped into the bathroom, presumably to wash up. When he did not come out after some time, police said Miss Taylor knocked and, getting no answer, opened the door to see him going out a high, small bathroom window. She grabbed at his heels, but was unable to reach him, they reported.

The suicide certificate was issued by Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg.

Hedgecock Builds Brick by Colonial Methods

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 13.—While most of the Nation has been seeking relief from the summer heat, Nathanial R. Hedgecock has been looking with calm satisfaction at the 2000-degree log fire he's built here.

Hedgecock is busy baking brick just as they did it two centuries ago to build this colonial capital. His job is part of the work of restoring Williamsburg to its eighteenth century appearance.

He began setting up his brickyard and kiln during the summer, and completed stacking some 60,000 bricks in the kiln last week. Thursday, his workmen stopped tending the fire and in about a week the kiln will be cool enough to open.

It is the first "burning" of Williamsburg handmade brick here since before the war. But Hedgecock says the next burning will be during the winter. "That heat will be a little handier then," he explained.

Johns Hopkins Adds to Its Facilities

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 14.—Construction and renovation work costing about $860,000 is under way at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Dr. Edwin L. Crosby, director, said today.

The two largest projects are alterations and additions to three floors of the Monument st. dispensary building, costing more than $200,000, and expansion and renovation of the hospital's radiological facilities, costing almost as much.

Two new air-conditioned operating rooms are being constructed in the dispensary building, with plate glass domes over the operating tables for observation, and microphones to permit observers to hear the surgeons' comments.

For New Equipment

The larger part of the funds being spent on the radiology department is for new equipment. The department will be housed in a temporary building until the new surgical building on Monument st. is completed.

Construction of a suite of laboratories and offices in the Halsted building for the division of neurosurgery, including a room for work with radioactive isotopes, will start shortly at a cost of about $60,000.

Construction of an aural and speech rehabilitation center, and alterations and heating repairs in the Harriet Lane Home, costing about $95,000 is in progress.

In addition to these projects many lesser ones are now being completed. The program is being "undertaken at the present time with the greatest reluctance," Dr. Crosby said, "in view of the current high costs.

"However, the projects now in progress, or which will be begun soon, could be deferred no longer," he said.

The program is in addition to the new surgical building and new private patients' pavilion for which the hospital campaigned last year, he said.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 9, Formerly Wistful and Eager to Please, Is Becoming Boisterous in Bid for Attention; She Is Eclipsed by Sister, 11, Everybody's Pet

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the mother of two daughters, 9 and 11. The elder is a sunny, lovable child with a sparkling personality that attracts like a magnet. Also she is affected, cloyingly sweet and capable of such artifice that it distresses me at times.

The younger girl is definitely not unattractive. Eventually she will be a beauty, I think; but she is reserved, difficult to get to know, tremendously independent and self reliant. She is unusually brilliant and always eager to be helpful; but she is becoming bossy with her sister.

She tends to lead her, wait on her and help her. Amy accepts this passively because it serves her own ends. When she thinks I'm out of earshot she is very artful at getting Beth to do double-duty on the small chores assigned to both of them.

She whines and acts so helpless and useless that it's amazing, and while Beth knows it's an "act," and shows impatience by scolding, still she will do Amy's share for her. While I try to keep things on a normal, healthy basis, it keeps me on my toes.

Child's Distress Pains the Mother

IT IS becoming increasingly clear that Beth craves the love and admiration so freely lavished on her sister by others, and can't understand why it is denied her. To me it is heartbreaking when we meet new people to watch them begin instantly lauding Amy's charms while all but ignoring Beth,—and to see a hurt, defeated look replace the eager expectancy with which she waits her "turn" in vain.

She used to sidle up to people trying dumbly to show that she, too, wanted attention; but lately she is beginning to act boisterously loud to get their notice. To say that I am amazed when adults are so casually cruel to a child is putting it mildly. Are they so stupid as to think a child has no feelings?

I believe it's completely honest to say that never by word or look have I implied any difference in them. I lean over backwards to be impartial and fair and equally loving towards each. Or did, until recently. Nowadays I suspect I'm showing a bit more active affection for Beth in privacy, to compensate for what she doesn't get from others. Yet it would be impossible not to love the other little minx.

My greatest fear is that in time the younger girl will become warped or introverted in self defense or defiance; and I feel so helpless. Can you help us?

C. D.

Mother Isn't Being Sincere

DEAR C. D.: The attitude of thoughtless outsiders is making a bad matter worse at this stage, no doubt; but primarily the problem of Amy and Beth is home-grown, I think.

You say you've always leaned over backwards, until recently, to avoid any implication of favoritism. So much conscious effort at registering impartiality suggests you've been trying to disguise or overcome a basic pronounced preference for one.

Which one? Well, certainly not Beth. The picture you give of her personality is that of a child who has been wrestling unconsciously from earliest experience with a sense of being a starveling, set apart from the family love-feast.

All the signs are there: the blend of wistfulness and rising assertiveness; the eagerness to be helpful (precociously groping for acceptance that way); the reserve, the "difficult-to-know" temperament; the struggle to muster outstanding independence and self reliance, as compensatory forms of security, etc.

Further, the business of playing lackey to Amy, while on to her unfair game and impatient with it, suggests that Beth is doggedly humoring mother's favorite, so instinct tells her,—possibly in part with the unconscious aim of trying to keep on the good side of the little minx, whom she regards as having the advantage of her in every way.

Children Aren't Fooled by Mask

YOU'VE NEVER fooled either Beth or Amy in leaning over backwards to imply that you make no distinction between them. Each has sensed the falsity of your performance, which fosters coy complacency in Amy and increasing measure of nebulous anxiety in Beth.

In dealing with children, it isn't discerning nor does it ring true to try to treat them exactly alike. By inclination they are intensely individualistic; hence discipline, praise, reproof and instruction tailored to suit their special temperament must be applied, as their differences are to be harmonized and their best potentials realized.

For advice: To school the noxious artifice out of Amy and invest Beth with valid self-confidence, you've first got to bring your own maternal attitude into line with real values, moral and social. You've got to love each with X-ray discernment, so to speak; and be forthright in nailing Amy's nonsense as well as ready in praise of Amy's dearness,—though never in a spirit of comparison. To develop assurance in this endeavor, you need some psychiatrically-guided self-assesament to start, however.

Can disease be passed along from one person to another by blood transfusion? A worried relative seeks the answer through Mary Haworth's column tomorrow.

Must Realize He's Unpopular

Soap and Water Mouth Wash Won't Cure Child's Cursing

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

NO MATTER in what neighborhood your child grows up or with what group of children he plays, sooner or later he will begin to use profane words.

Obviously, one reason is that he imitates grownups who use such words. It's the allure of new words, which he soon discovers have a firecracker reaction on adults. It's the feeling, too, that he is getting bigger and he wants to use different words to emphasize that fact.

Enjoys the Reaction

HE ISN'T enormously influenced by the fact that you don't think it is "nice" for him to talk this way. He is influenced by your apparent shock when he says these words.

Much of the time he doesn't really know what he is saying or how it sounds to your adult ears. One boy of ten said he had heard a dirty story and his parents, unable to imagine what it could be, found that his idea of such a story was to repeat a jingle in which the phrase "hell-of-a" was used. Even he got a little breathless as he said this, yet one could see he felt himself very wickedly sophisticated.

The child of four to five picks up these words and his mother inevitably blames his fall upon the neighborhood children. Yet they had the same motivations and heard them from the same sources.

Make Reasonable Explanati

OF COURSE, you don't want your child to talk this way. No mother does. So she will explain how this sounds to grownups. She will tell the child that he does not know the meaning of the words he uses, and has no right to use them for that reason.

He should be told that all persons feel a sense of shock when a sweet child uses ugly words, and that some mothers might find him a poor companion for their children. Mothers do not want children around whose language offends them.

But it isn't wise to make too great a to-do or wash their mouths with soap, and otherwise dramatize their behavior. That makes it all the more alluring to children and offers them the opportunity to be distinctive by their misbehavior. It is more discouraging to the child if his accidental slips go without comment.

If he continues to use such words to offend you, then banish him from your presence, temporarily. "We don't talk that way," you say. "And I won't listen to it from you."

All mothers find this habit a passing attraction only, for children give up what they find to be universally censured.

Your Questions On Homemaking

1. It is necessary to store a good many of our household effects and a storeroom is available in the basement of our apartment house. Can you tell me how to store books (we have several boxes of good editions,) how to store large-sized table linens, and how best to pack away several different kinds of materials and blankets?

2. Is there any organization that would like to have books—fiction published during the past few years? H.L.W.

If this basement is as damp as most, it would be inadvisable to store textiles and books there. If it's relatively dry and you want to take the chance, prepare the things for storing as follows: Have blankets, linens, and other materials absolutely clean. Soiled materials are more likely to be damaged by moths and mildew than clean ones. Do not leave sizing and laundry starch in fabrics, as both silverfish and molds feed on them.

Line trunks or boxes with wrapping paper before packing. Use plenty of moth killer with woolens. About a pound of moth crystals, scattered between layers of tissue paper, should be evenly distributed through the average-sized trunk. After closing the trunk, seal the top down, as well as all cracks and crevices, with gummed tape.

Pack books in paper-lined boxes, with paper next each volume to prevent rubbing of the covers. Since silverfish are likely to hide in basement, it's well to dust pyrethrum or 10 per cent DDT powders in the boxes and around them. Seal up all cracks. If it seems necessary, dust books with paraformaldehyde to keep them from mildewing. Handle this chemical with care. It is very irritating to sensitive skins. A commercial product is on sale in the household section of a Washington department store to protect clothes and other articles against mildew. Or cotton cloth may be treated with soap and cadmium chloride. First dip cloth in hot soapsuds, then in a hot solution of cadmium chloride (1½ ounces to 1 gallon water). Stir and turn the fabric in the bath about 15 minutes. Then wring and hang to dry on a twine clothesline before packing.

1. I would like to cut the bars off the head of a metal bed. Can you tell me whether this can be done satisfactorily at home. If so, what is the procedure and what tools are needed?

2. Our shower rod has begun to rust. What can be applied to refinish it? C. B. M.

1. The bars on the bed can be cut off with a hacksaw. If they're solid, use a coarse blade; if tubular, a fine-toothed blade. Smooth down the rough edge with a file. Holes left by tubular metal bars can be filled in with wooden blocks and putty, then painted over, if you plan to repaint the bed.

2. Chrome paint, obtainable from automotive supply companies, is excellent for refinishing shower rods.

Mrs. Johnston Flies To Nephew's Wedding

By Marie McNair

Mrs. Olin D. Johnston, wife of the Senator from South Carolina, left by plane Saturday for Hollywood.

No, she's not going to take a screen test. The reason for her trip is to attend the wedding of her nephew William Moss, and Jane Withers, famous as a juvenile screen star who's seems suddenly to have grown up.

The ceremony will take place next Saturday in the Presbyterian Church in the film capital and Mrs. Ruth Withers the star's mother, will entertain at a reception afterward.

There'll be half a dozen of Miss Wither's movie friends in the wedding party but top honors will go to Bill Moss' sister, Betty, a student at Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, who'll be maid of honor.

Young Bill Moss is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moss of Odessa, Tex., the latter a frequent visitor to her sister here. Saturday's bridegroom is also in pictures and has appeared in a number of films. He finally got into the producing end of the business and now has his own company. Mrs. Johnston was accompanied on the trip by an old friend—Mrs. J. C. Long who flew up from Charleston, S. C., to join Mrs. Johnston here. The Senator will also go out for the wedding but previous committments in South Carolina, Atlanta, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala., kept him from taking off with his wife.

Your USED FATS ARE Still Needed!

says KATHARINE FISHER, Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

We're still not out of the woods, by any means. There is still a fat shortage all over the world. Here is what Mr. Clinton P. Anderson, Secretary of Agriculture, says about the situation: "It is still necessary to conserve every pound of used fat, since the over-all fat supply situation is little better now than it was last year." So . . . all of you women who have done such a marvelous job...please, keep up the good work. It's the only way we can beat the shortage. Remember, every pound of salvaged fat helps.

Va. to Start Budget Work This Week

Richmond, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—The spade work on Virginia's 1948-50 budget—a fiscal plan which, in view of anticipated heavy requests for more funds for education, health, welfare and other causes, may wind up near the 400 million dollar mark—will begin this week.

Governor Tuck and the eight members of his budget advisory commission meet with budget director J. H. Bradford here Monday for a preliminary conference on budget plans.

Then, in the next two weeks, the budget group will make its biennial go-and-see tour of various State institutions to learn of their needs first hand.

Three days of public hearings are scheduled here October 6-8 to receive specific requests of various departments, institutions and agencies.

After that, the budget-makers will go into seclusion and attempt to whip proposed appropriations into approximate balance with expected revenues—a process sure to include much ax-wielding and possibly consideration of additional taxes.

The results will not be known publicly until Governor Tuck sends his budget message to the General Assembly early in January. And the final budget shape will be determined by the 140 members of the House of Delegates and State Senate.

For the current biennium, which ends June 30, the State budget provides $340,060,098, including the supplemental funds for education and other allotments made by the special session of the Legislature last January.

Persistent demands for far-reaching betterments in public schools, mental hospitals, welfare institutions, public assistance, public health, and other services can be met only by hefty increases in appropriations. Even to meet these demands only partly will cost a lot of money. Without any improvements of the existing scheme, soaring costs and the inflationary trend would call for bigger outlays to maintain the status quo.

All of which, plus the general theory among department heads that the more you ask for the more you're likely to get when the whittling is over, makes it appear that requests presented to the budgeteers will total around 500 million dollars.

Even if this total is chipped down to, say, 380 million dollars, and the State's present revenue sources continue to yield funds at their present high level, there would be a gap of some 20 million dollars to be filled either by increasing present taxes or enacting new ones.

One tax prospect mentioned with increasing frequency in recent months is a sales tax. Some observers have asserted that the dominant Democratic organization is preparing a sales tax program. Governor Tuck, however, has said nothing publicly on the subject so far, nor has he indicated what tax ideas he has in mind.

Some indication of the prevailing thought on the sales tax may come in the report of the Moses Commission, a legislative group assigned to study school matters and, specifically, the possibilities of a State sales tax to provide more money for schools.

Extra! Cop Involved in Holdup (of Kid's Pants)

It was at Park rd. and Mount Pleasant st. nw. The big cop was escorting two children across the street.

One of the boys was about 4, the other between 2 and 3. Each had his tiny hand clasped in one of the policeman's.

"Hey, I'm losing something."

He certainly was. He was losing his pants.

So the policeman reached down and grabbed the sagging trousers, made some emergency repairs, and then proceeded across the street.

On the far side he buttoned the pants up good and snug and sent the boys on their way. When they were gone he permitted himself the luxury of an indulgent grin, and went back to work.

FISH STORY ANSWER

The way I figure it, there can be an infinite number of answers to Saturday's fish problem from Margaret Hawkins.

My answer is that 781 plus any multiple of 3125 will permit five equal divisions and always leave one odd fish.

If I'm wrong I'll probably hear from my old arithmetic teacher by noon.

KNEES

The current controversy over the length of women's dresses brings to mind a parody written some time back by Aubrey Garber of Route 1, Alexandria, Va.

I think that I shall never see
A joint as lovely as a knee.
A knee that may in summer wear
A nylon stocking—or go bare.

* * * *

A knee that stylists all confess
Must not be covered by a dress.
A knee that sculptors always fail
To duplicate in full detail.

* * * *

For clay is shaped by hands like these
While only girls have shapely knees.

CLOSE CALL

M. B. d'A. announces with obvious glee that she's caught me in a mistake.

After all the fuss about women who use the word "adorable" promiscuously, she says I used it myself to describe "four adorable kittens" that were offered for adoption. But watch me wriggle out of this:

My dear young lady! Don't you see the quotation marks that I invariably use around the descriptions furnished by the owners of the pets?

INFORMATION PLEASE

Harry G. Miller of 1717 G st. nw. wonders if any of you District Liners have the answers to two questions that have been bothering him.

1. Why isn't there a weathervane in Washington? (To show the politicians which way the wind is blowing, Harry?)

2. Why isn't the flag flown from most Goverment buildings on Saturdays and Sundays?

PERSONAL NOTE

Dear M. M.: The water bill has been paid, and the family in question no longer has to buy its water by the pail. Please identify yourself by naming the correct amount of money you sent me, and then tell me what you want done with it. How about giving it to Children's Hospital? W. E. G.

CAT'S WHISKERS

The stories about intelligent cats are still rolling in. Our latest is from June Henderson of 2308 Ashmead pl. nw.

June had a cat who wouldn't drink anything but water. What's more, she eventually learned to wash herself by dipping her paw in the water and rubbing it over her face.

He'd hop up on a table where a whiskbroom was kept and clean his teeth by running the bristles of the whiskbroom through them.

If anybody tops that one I give up.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

The Army recruiting station on 10th st. nw. displays the legend:

"Through These Portals Pass the Guardians of Victory."

Grin and Bear It

"Oh, I always trade here—I find it's much easier to be robbed by someone you know!"

Leonard Lyons

Red Lewis Also Voted for Himself

NEW YORK.—Whit Burnett, who is completing his anthology of the favorite writings of the world's top authors, selected the authors by polling 6000 college president, authors, crjtics, etc. The balloting will be fnished this month . . .

Sinclair Lewis was among those who received ballots. He replied: "Does an author, under such circumstances, vote for himself? Or should he pray to God and wonder what Lincoln would have done?" Mr. Lewis resovled his doubts and voted for himself.

Phil Silvers, who has been spending the last few years playing secondary comedy roles in movies, will have his first big role in the forthcoming Broadway musical, "High Button Shoes." Silvers was a burlesque comedian, working the Minsky wheel, when Lew Brown saw him and offered him an opportunity in "Yokel Boy." Silver quickly accepted the job, and rehearsed carefully. Two hours before the premiere, his first real opportunity, Silvers was nervous and overanxious.

He paced his dressing room, then paced the hallway, then walked outside—to the nearby Gaiety Burlesque Theater, where he walked onstage, did a half hour routine, heard the burlesque audience laugh, and lost his nervousness. Two hours later he made his Broadway debut in "Yokel Boy," and his smooth performance won him a movie contract

When in his walks through the streets of Princeton, N. J., Albert Einstein is stopped by people who say, "So you're the great Einstein," he always shakes his head and says, "not the great Einstein" . . . "Such an answer," he explains, "is both truthful and modest" . . .

A visitor at Einstein's home once related his peronal business problems—the matter of inventories, sales force, bad debts and machinery and equipment. He asked his host: "Do you have any such problems?" . . . "No" said Einstein, "these are my only tools." And he displayed two leaky fountain pens.

NBC waived its ban on profanity this week, to permit its commentators to quote from the American magazine article in which Herbert Hoover says that Stalin would make agreements "with the full knowledge that they aren't worth a damn if they do not work out to his advantage" . . .

Before Noel Coward sailed for America he was invited to a London party given by Beatrice Lillie. He acknowledged the R. S. V. P. with a note: "Mr. Coward regrets exceedingly that he will be able to attend the dreary party which is being given by Miss Beatrice Lillie."

Clifton Fadiman and Gjon Milli returned from Hollywood with enough money pledged to assure all the financing necessary for the magazine, "47." Hollywood's foremost writers, directors and producers bought stock in the publication. The first money came from Jimmy Durante who, when he saw them, said: "Fadiman and Milli. I know you two and why you're here. It's for "47." Durante then gave them a check for $1000. . . .

Durante was disappointed only in that John Gunther hadn't accompanied them. "I once almost met Gunther," he said. "It was in London, when I was staying at the Savoy. He'd phone my room, but when I'd answer Gunther would hang up." Gunther's explanation later was: "I had the wrong room. I was phoning Walter Duranty."

A GREAT STORE IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

Senator James E. Murray . . . Butte, Montana, lawyer . . . an outstanding statesman from the Great Northwest . . . has been a member of the United States Senate since 1934.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

MONTANA . . . the treasure state

Montana is a State of natural wealth and youth, scenic beauty and spaciousness. Together, they create the greatness that is Montana . . . a State with youth and vigor for continued growth and development. Montana's wealth was originally from gold . . . the streets of Butte and Helena, as early mining camps, could be said to have been literally paved with that precious metal . . . and in the days when it was used as the standard for the currency of our country, silver became an important mineral product. Today, golden wheat and priceless meat have largely supplanted the golden metal as the backbone of Montana's economy . . . and the range where the buffalo so recently roamed now provides rich grazing land for sheep and handsome white-faced cattle. However, great portions of Montana have been left in their natural unspoiled state, as Primitive Areas, abounding in all forms of wild life. Montana demonstrates the truth of Horace Greely's oft-quoted advice: "Go West, young man." The generous courtesy of The Hecht Company affords us this opportunity to invite you all to come West to Montana . . . to enjoy the splendors of Nature's handiwork, which are unmatched elsewhere in the United States . . . to relax on a dude ranch . . . where the pleasures of rustic living are served to you on a silver platter of modern comfort . . . or to tour the Yellowstone National Park, Glacier Park, the Bob Marshall Wilderness and our many other scenic attractions. Above all, come West to Montana . . . where opportunity in the good old American tradition awaits you.

James E. Murray

Senior Senator, Montana

MONTANA . . . With a veritable pot o' gold within its mountains . . . along with great stores of copper, silver, zinc, manganese, oil and coal . . . and vast deposits of phosphate rock. From the soil, Montanans also derive another kind of wealth . . . in agricultural production.

MONTANA . . . Where gold is still mined by placer as well as hard-rock methods . . . and the old prospector remains a part of the mining scene. Even today, gold is dredged within the city limits of Helena . . . where, in 1911, excavation for the Placer Hotel yielded enough gold to pay a large part of the cost of the work . . . although the area had been thoroughly placer mined when Main Street was Last Chance Gulch. The Sapphire mine on Yogo Creek in the Judith Basin produces a large part of the Nation's output of precious stones.

MONTANA . . . With Butte . . . the greatest mining camp ever known . . . situated atop the "richest hill on earth" . . . source of a good part of the Nation's copper. The hill on which Butte is built has yielded more than two and one-half billion dollars worth of metal to date. Anaconda has the world's largest non-ferrous metal reduction plant, the Washoe . . . and Great Falls is also a large copper refiner. Montana has 594 lode mines and 282 placer mines.

MONTANA . . . Whose leading industry is agriculture. Largely dependent on irrigation, Montana is seventh in U. S. production of wheat, noted for its heavy protein content . . . raises barley, hay, oats, corn, potatoes, fruit, white-faced cattle and sheep. Lumbering also ranks high as an industry of the State. Billings, along with four other cities, has large beet sugar factories, and is a big shipper of cattle and flour.

MONTANA . . . Third State in area in the Nation . . . with its borders enveloping a paradise of natural beauties . . . ridged on the west by the Rocky Mountains. The tourist will enjoy such scenic wonders as hot springs . . . wilderness areas . . . stalactites and stalagmites in delicately tinted limestone in the Lewis and Clark Caverns . . . and Glacier Park, containing more than 60 glaciers and 200 lakes and multi-colored alpine flowers. Montana claims one of the Nation's most colorful collections of wild flowers.

MONTANA . . . Land of the dude ranch . . . where one vacation may include horseback riding . . . hiking . . . swimming . . . fishing . . . mountain climbing . . . rodeos . . . horseshoe pitching . . . hay rides . . . square dances . . . and in the winter, skiing, snow shoeing and tobogganing. Big game hunting in Montana is a nimrod's dream come true . . . with grizzly bear, antelope, beaver, marmot, otter, marten . . . and the second largest elk herd in America. Big Medicine, one of the last of the albino buffalo alive today, makes his home on the Natural Bison Range.

MONTANA . . . Whose memories of the lusty mining days and the vigilantes are still very much alive, is exploring new frontiers in mining, agriculture and industry, with the dauntless pioneering spirit of its original settlers.
